Figures Of Chain Stores Given At Federal Inquiry

Auditor Tells Price Spreads Commission at Ottawa Six Organizations Had Increased Profits in 1933 As Compared With 1929

Report Made On Mass Buying

Canadian Press
Ottawa, Nov. 12.—Canadian chain stores have suffered relatively little damage during the depression, the Mass Buying Commission was told today by F. P. Higgins, Toronto auditor. The commission's investigation into chain stores and their effect on the general business community started today.

The commission auditor showed that six of the large chain organizations had increased gross profits, net profits and dividends paid, comparing 1933 with 1929. This financial betterment was recorded in the light of slight decreases in net sales. During the same years, manufacturers, farmers and other classes had suffered acute losses, Mr. Higgins said.

The growth of Canadian chain stores had been marked since 1926, the commission was told. It was shown that 83.9 per cent of all chain stores and 67.7 per cent of food chain stores existing in 1929 had begun operations since 1926.

The combined purchases of six large chains for the last fiscal year were $48,105,595. These firms spent $235,809 on advertising.

FOOD CHAINS

"Mass buying," said Mr. Higgins, "may be glimpsed from the 1933 purchases of four food chains for the following commodities: Tea, 576,393 pounds from one plant; Soap, 4,132,720 cans from one plant; Soap, 127,971 cases purchased from one manufacturer; and 822,234 lbs. of group (of four chains) during the year."

The financial growth of chain organizations also was shown by the auditor. One chain increased its investment, including appreciation of assets, from $40,135 at the time of incorporation to $5,197,152. Another increased its investment from $400,000 to $5,578,771, and another from $881,010 to $1,248,029.

Pittsford, N.Y., Nov. 12.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, Lindbergh kidnapping suspect, declared today that Dr. John F. Condon, the intermediary in the kidnapping ransom payment, had "indicated" to him he was satisfied that he, Hauptmann, had "nothing to do" with the kidnapping.

Bandits Rob Bank; Soon Are Arrested

Four Men Surprise Staff in Winnipeg, But Are Caught Fifty Miles Away

Canadian Press
Winnipeg, Nov. 12.—Four robbers made a successful raid on the Royal Bank of Canada branch at Mountain and McGregor streets here during the noon hour today and escaped with approximately $1,000. One of the four held up the three bank employees with a revolver while the others looted the safe. They escaped in a waiting automobile.

Police rushed to the scene, but an hour after the hold-up no trace of the robbers had been found.

The bank, situated in the north end district of Winnipeg, was robbed of almost the same amount of money in August, 1931.

The bandits later were arrested at Winnipeg Beach, fifty miles north of here, and the money recovered.

Taxpayers of Victoria who have not yet met their 1934 levies were today urged by officials of the city treasury to meet their obligations before next Friday to avoid a further penalty of one per cent charged against the delinquents.

The one per cent increase will be the third since October 2 when the first penalty went into effect.

The major penalty will be imposed on December 4, when a jump of 5 per cent will be made in the extra charge against unpaid taxes.

Victorians Pay Tribute at Cenotaph on Armistice Day

A simple but very impressive service was conducted at the Cenotaph in Parliament Square yesterday morning, and in the above picture is shown a small section of the vast crowd gathered to honor the fallen and breathe a prayer that war should be no more. To the left is a bluejacket from the Royal Canadian Navy with arms reversed and head bowed, on guard for the fallen. To his right is Rev. F. H. Buck, who conducted the service. The piper who played the lament, "Flowers of the Forest," and the trumpeters who sounded "The Last Post" and "Reveille," are on the right of the picture, with their backs to the camera.

LATE SIR DONALD MANN

Toronto, Nov. 12.—There was a gap in the ranks of Canada's builders to-day following the death of Sir Donald D. Mann, picturesque pioneer of the railway construction days. The retired financier, who was in his eighty-second year, was stricken with a heart attack at his home here and died early yesterday.

Sir Donald, although not very strong because of his advanced age, had not been ill. It was at bedtime, Saturday evening, the sudden attack came.

The railroad builder, who quit active business life years ago, had lived quietly with his wife and son here.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

The funeral service will be held at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, King Street, to-morrow, starting at 2 o'clock.

Following the church service burial will be made at Acton, Halton County, in the family plot, where Sir Donald's father, mother and a brother were buried. The pallbearers will be: Major-Gen. J. W. Stewart of Vancouver, D. B. Hanna, Toronto; A. J. Mitchell, Toronto; W. A. Kingsland, Toronto; J. F. Lash, Toronto; Scott Griffin, Toronto; R. G. O. Thompson, Toronto; C. A. Bogart, Toronto; Col. J. Vancouver's Tax Sale Cancelled

Civic Administration Prepares Six-year Consolidation Scheme to Include Arrears Since 1931; Covering B.C. Legislation Promised

Canadian Press
Vancouver, Nov. 12.—Vancouver's 1934 tax sale, scheduled to open to-morrow, has been cancelled and the civic administration is preparing a six-year tax consolidation scheme to cover arrears from 1931 to 1934 inclusive, with the possibility it may also cover 1930 arrears.

With the assurance of Hon. A. Wells Gray, British Columbia Minister of Lands and Municipal Affairs, that the provincial Legislature will grant covering legislation at its next session, the City Council took action to-day to halt the sale of 3,764 parcels of property, including 1,024 homes which were to have been sold for back taxes.

Plans to cancel the sale were initiated privately last September by Mayor L. D. Taylor, who went to Victoria to obtain the support of Premier T. D. Pattullo. When statistics of the sale were available a few days ago, Mr. Taylor obtained definite assurance of government support to cancellation.

EATON DENIES MARKET DUEL

Cleveland Capitalist Takes Stand as Defence Witness at Insult Trial in Chicago

Associated Press
Chicago, Nov. 12.—Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland capitalist, took the stand to-day as a defence witness for Samuel Insull, Chicago utilities magnate, and denied he had instigated a $50,000,000 stock market duel in 1930.

Eaton, a native of Nova Scotia, appearing at the request of Insull's attorney, Floyd E. Thompson, was the first witness as the Insull trial moved into its seventh week.

Eaton, couching his answers in rather formal language, was led by Attorney Thompson into a discussion of the business connections of Insull.

"I am a director of the Inland Steel Company and of Sherwin Williams," said Eaton. He mentioned he was also a trustee of the University of Chicago.

"How long have you known Mr. Insull?"

"A good many years," Eaton answered. "I have been in the utilities business most of my life, and in that field I came into contact with him."

Eaton said he was not now "officially connected" with any public utility company, but that during the period under scrutiny in the trial—

SILVER PRICE AT LONDON UP

Associated Press
London, Nov. 12.—The United States dollar lost one cent to the pound sterling here to-day, closing at $5.004.

The Belgian cabinet crisis was responsible for a weak trend in gold currencies after a steady opening and continental offerings caused a gradual setback with a corresponding firmness of the pound. The dollar weakened in sympathy with gold currencies.

Conditions in the gold market were more quiet and the price of bar gold was unchanged at 139 shillings 6 pence ($34.81) a fine ounce.

The price of silver underwent a smart spurt of 1 1/2 pence to 25 1/2 pence an ounce, the highest price since May, 1929, because of heavy speculative purchases, principally by China. Supplies available were small and the open market was described as uncertain.

STATE HEALTH SCHEME MOVES

Hon. G. M. Weir Leaves For East; Preparing Measure For Legislature

Another step toward completion of British Columbia's initial state health insurance plan will be recorded with the visit to Eastern Canada this month of Hon. G. M. Weir, Provincial Secretary.

Dr. Weir left here yesterday, and will entrain in Vancouver this afternoon. He is expected to return early in December.

It has become fairly evident that a health insurance scheme here will be started on a small scale, the limitation being the earning capacity of the insured persons. Data compiled with the aid of hospital authorities and provincial health experts will be used in determining the scope of the plan.

Actuaries are working now on these figures to devise a system which will be basically sound and give a fair measure of benefits.

The minister will go into the whole matter with the actuaries in the east, and upon his return it is expected he will be ready to prepare the legislation for the house. Assurance has been given a measure will be introduced. It will probably take about a year to get into operation.

Emphasizing the need for a scheme recently Dr. Weir pointed out that B.C.'s health bill on all counts was estimated at $10,000,000 yearly. This represented $3,500,000 paid by the province and municipalities, the remainder being the expenditure of citizens.

FINDS REVIVAL IN WEST CANADA

Montreal, Nov. 12.—"I have a more optimistic view of the West than ever before," declared Alister Fraser, K.C., traffic vice-president of the Canadian National Railways, to-day on his return from an inspection trip to Western Canada.

"Business men in every city in Western Canada report better business this year than last," he said. "In general all along the line and as a result there is a tone of optimism evident throughout the western provinces."

Even in cities adjacent to the dried-out areas of the prairie provinces, notable increases in general trade had taken place.

UNITE AGAINST PAGANISM

Catholic Newspaper in Berlin Asks Protestants Join in Movement in Germany

Associated Press
Berlin, Nov. 12.—Four centuries of bitter strife between Catholicism and Protestantism in Germany were forgotten to-day as Catholics through their Berlin newspaper, asked Protestants to join common cause against the new pagan movement.

A significant announcement in the Katholische Kirchenblatt, organ of the Berlin diocese, suggested to the government that "Catholics and the Evangelical church are ready to march hand in hand with positive Christian leadership of the state."

Previously both Catholic and Protestant leaders, the latter at the church dictatorship of Reichsbishop Ludwig Muller, had turned to Germany's Faith Movement headed by Dr. Albert Rosenberg, Nazi philosopher dictator, as the next enemy to be destroyed.

The newspaper's startling proposal that the two faiths join hands against paganism came almost simultaneously with an announcement by Dr. Bernhard Rust, Prussian commissioner for culture and recreation, the Catholic teachers in German schools need not read Rosenberg's "Myth of the twentieth century," foundation stone of the movement.

BIG TAX SUITS

Washington, Nov. 12 (Associated Press)—Before the winter is out the United States Government hopes to collect at least $22,533,708 in back taxes from firms alleged to have participated in the diversion of alcohol from industrial to beverage uses during prohibition. Seventeen suits asking for this aggregate amount have been filed against companies charged with the diversion itself or with financing the operations.

REVIEW OF MOONEY CASE

U.S. Supreme Court Orders California to Produce Arguments

Washington, Nov. 12.—The United States Supreme Court to-day ordered California to show within forty days why a review should not be granted Thomas J. Mooney in his eighteen-year campaign to escape serving the remainder of his life sentence for complicity in the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing.

Through his attorneys, the fifty-one-year-old San Quentin penitentiary convict asked that he be brought to Washington in an effort to convince the court at a hearing that he was convicted on perjured evidence following the deaths of ten persons and the injuring of forty-four in the bombing.

He declared the state admitted the evidence was perjured, but was powerless under its statutes to set aside the verdict if there had been no error of law in the trial.

GIVEN COMMUTATION

Mooney originally was sentenced to death, but it was commuted to life imprisonment following appeals from President Woodrow Wilson and others. Once before—in 1918—the Supreme Court refused to interfere in the Mooney case. It declined to pass on the refusal of California courts to grant him a new trial.

Toledo, O., Nov. 12.—Six persons suffering from exposure were rescued by the U.S. coastguard cutter Corwin to-day from their cabin cruiser, the Sylvia, aground off Turtle Island, about five miles from here in Lake Erie.

The Sylvia had been missing since yesterday and fears had been expressed for the safety of those aboard. All of the six were taken off in a choppy sea, and were placed aboard the Corwin, which immediately started for Toledo.

Those aboard the Sylvia were Mr. and Mrs. Orville Aufdenkampe, their daughter Jeanette, seventeen; their son Glenn, twelve; Ralph Hepper, nineteen; and his brother Edwin, twenty-two, all of Toledo.

At the Cenotaph, national shrine in the capital of the Empire, the King, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York joined thousands of others in a simple, brief service paying homage to the memory of the war dead.

The Queen, the Duchess of York and other royal personages watched the service from a window of the Home Office.

As Rumors of Military Measures Heard Gen. Jan C. Smuts, Speaking in London, Denounces Talk of War

British Ex-Officers Are Saar Police

Canadian Press from Havas
London, Nov. 12.—Authoritative British circles to-day sharply denied a report that the military general staffs of Great Britain, Belgium and France had concluded a secret pact for technical concerted action in case of air attacks.

Dispatches from Paris indicated rumors of a Belgo-French pact also had met denial in official quarters there.

A dispatch from Paris this morning read: "Technical accords whereby the British, Belgian and French military staffs will act in concert in case of air attacks have been concluded. The London correspondent of The Paris Midi wrote to-day."

The accords were begun by the late Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, and concluded recently when General Maxime Weygand, French Chief of Staff, visited London, it was stated.

Although not officially rectified by the governments, the accords are a sequel to the now famous speech by Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin, British Lord President of the Council, declaring that "Britain's frontier is now the Rhine," the correspondent said.

Canadian Press
London, Nov. 12.—Talk of war was denounced to-night by General Jan Smuts, famous South African soldier and statesman, as he addressed the dinner of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. He ridiculed the idea the German people are deliberately preparing for a war of revenge.

General Smuts eloquently pleaded for the recognition of Germany's complete status of equality. He urged speedy action to save the situation, bring Germany back to the Disarmament Conference and the League of Nations, which he declared would probably be a substantial step forward to an international disarmament agreement.

Dealing with the Far East, he admitted that Manchukuo was a danger signal, but he appealed for the friendliest spirit toward Japan and urged that everything possible in the power of diplomacy be done to avoid even the appearance of antagonism between east and west.

Another solemn and impressive service was held at Westminster Abbey, where the tomb of the Unknown Warrior was the terminus for the pilgrimages of the war-bereaved.

The Duke of Kent, son of the King, participated in ceremonies at the Edinburgh Cenotaph. Similar ceremonies were held in the principal cities of Britain and throughout the far-flung Empire.

League Urges Empire Defences Be Built Up

Rumors of New Military Alliance Denied

London, Nov. 12.—The Saar Governing Commission is recruiting British ex-officers for police service in the Saar during the plebiscite period. The British Government, as a member of the League, is facilitating contact with the officers, but is accepting no responsibility.

The government clarified the situation in the House of Commons this afternoon in view of reports that it was taking a hand in recruiting for the Saar police forces, which the Saar Governing Commission has demanded should be strengthened in order to ensure a free vote in the plebiscite of January 13, when the Saar will vote whether to return to Germany, join France or remain under the League Commission.

QUESTIONS BY LANSBURY

When the regular question hour had closed, Rt. Hon. George Lansbury, Labor leader, on a private notice of question demanded to know whether it was correct that recruiting for the Saar service was being carried out through the Foreign Office, and the War Office.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald replied that under the resolution adopted by the Council of the League of Nations last June, the secretary-general of the League had recommended to members on September 3 that they should facilitate the task of the Saar Governing Commission in recruiting additional personnel outside the Saar for its police forces during the plebiscite period.

In response to this communication a number of applications had been received from ex-officers, and forwarded to the Saar Commission after preliminary inquiry into certain practical points, such as ability to speak French and German, said the Prime Minister.

NO SECRET RECRUITING. "It is absolutely untrue," he declared, "that recruitment is being conducted secretly by either the War Office or the Foreign Office, or both."

Out of twenty ex-officers recruited only two were of British nationality, he said. It was also untrue that no other country was helping in the recruitment.

"Is Britain invited to make a contribution of a certain quota?" another Laborite pressed.

"There is no question of a quota at all," Premier MacDonald replied. "It is not the case that if the recruitment is not up to a certain number we are under obligation to provide it. This is purely free recruiting."

"The Saar Commission requires help for purely police purposes during the plebiscite period. It is known generally all over Europe that ex-officers may apply for employment."

"But have we as a country any special facilities for carrying out this recruiting?" another Laborite pressed.

"No," said Mr. MacDonald. "We have no responsibility. If anything should happen then it is not our responsibility one way or the other. As members of the League we are simply facilitating contact between those who want employment and those who are asking for applications for employment."

ARBITRATION LEADERS' PLEA

Premier Bennett and Speakers in Other Nations Advocate Peace Measures

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was one of five statesmen whose voices circled the globe with an international message of peace yesterday. The Canadian Premier warned the problem of security must be considered in spiritual terms. "Security based on armaments," he said, "inevitably means war."

Sir John Simon, Britain's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and leaders of thought in the United States, Czechoslovakia and Brazil spoke along with Mr. Bennett on the international broadcast, held under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

CANADA AND THE "Security based on goodwill and friendly, neighborly relations such as exist on the North American continent, ensures peace," said Mr. Bennett.

The safety of one nation guaranteed by arms was the source of another nation's fears, "but the eternal truth remains that there is no real security until the spectre of fear is banished." There would have to be a new approach to the problem, based on spiritual rather than material things, said Mr. Bennett.

Memories of 1914 remained fresh in the minds of many and were a powerful incentive for the maintenance of peace, Mr. Bennett said, "but what of the generations of the future, released if but momentarily from the influence of this dreadful memory? If we accept the philosophy that man has not the moral force and power to rise above his present obvious desires, then by more act of universal folly he will have reached his goal of self-annihilation."

BY ARBITRATION

The other speakers on the broadcast yesterday warned against the consequences of another major conflict and urged the settlement of disputes by friendly means. In the programme Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University, New York, said: "Now is the hour for public opinion to act and to insist that governments should order their affairs from it and from it alone."

"If public opinion tells governments that there will be no war," he said, "there will be no war."

JAPAN'S POSITION

Prince Tokugawa, former president of the Japanese House of Peers, referring to Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations following disagreement over the new state of Manchukuo, emphasized that "our separation from the League does not mean isolation from the family of nations."

"It is not too much to say Japan is the mainstay of peace on the Pacific Ocean," he said. "This will be a simple question: What would have been the situation on the Asiatic continent if there had been no Japan?"

"GOOD NEWS"

Associated Press

San Quentin Prison, Cal., Nov. 12.—Tom Mooney today received the information the United States Supreme Court had taken action on his petition for a habeas corpus writ with the smiling comment "good news."

He was peeling vegetables for the prisoners in the kitchen. James B. Holahan, the formal respondent in the court rule, delivered the telegram, signed Attorney John F. Finerty, in Washington.

Drying his hands as he read the message, Mooney commented: "All of my issues will be laid before the court and the state must show cause why I should not be granted the writ."

"I hope the court will wind up the case by granting the writ."

HUEY P. LONG PLANS UTOPIA

Louisiana Moratorium Feature of Scheme; White House Is Eyed

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 12.—Huey P. Long, riding high in the political saddle of Louisiana, has his eyes on the White House.

The dashing leader has summoned his chosen squadron, the Legislature, to fall in line this evening for a campaign destined to apply to the state, but to influence the whole United States. Having swept aside all opposition in Louisiana, Long is marching on broader fields.

The lawmakers have been called into a special session to turn Louisiana into a "Utopia" for the average man. That, the senator reasons, will swing armies of voters.

Chief among his measures will be a moratorium on debt. He feels debt is the problem of every average citizen, and any assessment in that direction would make a host of Long boosters. He hopes to have Louisiana pointed to as a Utopia for the average man.

"What about the student loans at 87 a head?" Long was asked in connection with the money he advanced to students at Louisiana State University students so they could attend a football game.

"I'm glad you brought that up. We're going to fix it so the moratorium won't apply to debts under $87."

At the moment Huey Long is the government of Louisiana. He dominates every department of the state, and he has demonstrated that in an election he is unbeatable. His legislative will pass any law he proposes.

Sir Donald Mann Of Rail Building Fame Passes Away

NEWS SHOCK TO FRIENDS

Sir Donald, despite his eighty-one years, generally speaking had been in good health, and his death came as a shock to friends, the end he had retained his forceful personality that had made him the workmen's idol during the early days when the ribbons of steel were being laid across the Dominion. A big, two-fisted leader without fear, Sir Donald played a leading part in building up the west. He was a figure in the world of finance and politics at one period of the last half century and was a member of that noted partnership, Mackenzie and Mann, which was founded in 1886.

The building firm reached into numerous fields, but transportation work brought Sir Donald his fame. Railway building knew the name of Mann from coast to coast. Broad-shouldered, with a powerful body, Sir Donald was born in Acton in 1853, fifth child in a family of ten.

RELIGIOUS HOUSEHOLD

The Mann household was devotedly religious and 365 days a year Donald Mann knelt in family prayer before breakfast. It was a Scottish household of the most rigorous type, and Donald Mann, like his brothers, was brought up in fear of the Lord.

Had his father prevailed, Donald Mann would have become a Presbyterian preacher, not a railroad builder. As it turned out, Donald Mann decided to quit farming forever and in the spring of 1871 he told his father he was leaving. His father said he was welcome to go if he would go to college and study to be a preacher, but the younger declared all he wanted was to have his own business. He selected broad-shoulders, which he told the Russian second were the national weapons in Canada. The Russian's enthusiasm for the duel abated considerably when he was told of this, and the duel did not come off.

Storm of Almost Tidal Wave Proportions Does Damage at Egg Island, North of Vancouver Island

Canadian Press

Prince Rupert, Nov. 12.—Word has just been received at Marine Department headquarters here of a storm of almost tidal wave proportions which recently swept the Egg Island lighthouse, lonely pivot point to navigation between Vancouver and Prince Rupert, doing considerable minor damage by washing away everything movable and demolishing the island of trees and shrubs.

Keeper J. W. Webster has his garden. It was the first time since the light had been established there some thirty years ago that the waves from Queen Charlotte Sound had been known to climb over a reef in front of the island, which ordinarily acts as a break for the waves.

Damage included the washing down of an aerial tripod, breaking of doors, and windows in the oil house, tearing of shingles off the walls of the lighthouse, carrying away of walks, stairways and veranda and the washing out of the garden.

Light Keeper Webster, who lives there with his wife and two children, was, however, able to maintain the light service uninterrupted.

The lighthouse tender Newington, Capt. Harry Ormiston, which has been storm-bound while on a trip to Cape St. James lighthouse at the south end of Queen Charlotte Islands, was crossing Hecate Strait to Digby Island today and will be sent to Egg Island this week with lumber and other materials necessary for making repairs there.

NET MACKENZIE IN 1878

William Mackenzie and Donald Mann first met in 1885, when Donald was operating his railway contract and Mackenzie was erecting sawmills for the Canadian Pacific Railway. Out of their friendship grew the great business partnership that reigned for many a year. Their first joint job was with the Canadian Pacific in 1887. Two years later he went to Chile to build a railway, but came back to carry on his railway construction work in the west.

START OF NORTHERN

When Mann and Mackenzie formed their company they launched on their history-making task, which included construction of the Edmonton, Qu'Appelle, Long Lake and Saskatchewan railway lines. In 1896 Mann obtained a charter to build the Canadian Northern, which became the Canadian Northern.

In 1908 he and his partner secured bond guarantees from the government of Alberta and Saskatchewan for building branch lines in those provinces. They also negotiated an agreement with the British Columbia government for a guarantee of the Canadian Northern funds to complete the line from Yellowhead Pass to Vancouver, at a cost of $35,000,000.

When the last spike was driven in the line that went to Vancouver in 1915, the Mackenzie-Mann interests had built a complete transcontinental transportation line. Years later it became the Canadian National, being united with the Grand Trunk and the Great Northern Pacific.

In 1911 the partners were knighted and Sir Donald and Lady Mann attended the coronation of King George.

ON NUMEROUS BOARDS

Mining interests grasped Sir Donald's attention on his return to the Dominion and he assumed directorships on boards of a number of financial organizations. When the Great War broke out he became an honorary colonel of the railway committee of the Department of Militia and Defence.

Not only Canada witnessed activities of Sir Donald Mann. He went to Chile on the request of that country's government, but refused to construct railways there. He also turned down offers in Ecuador and Peru. Then he toured China and Russia.

MARRIED IN WINNIPEG

Sir Donald's marriage took place in Winnipeg in 1887. His bride being Miss Jennie E. Williams of that city. One son was born to them.

Sir Donald was a Knight of Grace of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

Sir William Mackenzie, Sir Donald's former partner, died in Ontario a number of years ago.

BROAD-AXES FOR DUEL

Many legends grew up about the staid figure of Donald Mann. One story concerns an incident in China, where the Canadian was challenged to a duel by a pompous Russian count who took exception to remarks Sir Donald had made. Sir Donald was convinced the challenge must be accepted, but as the man challenged he had the right to choose his own weapons. He selected broad-axes, which he told the Russian's second were the national weapons in Canada. The Russian's enthusiasm for the duel abated considerably when he was told of this, and the duel did not come off.

Another story concerns his youth. He was in Acton, Ontario. The boy

Thongs Honor The War Dead

In little detachments, marched to war memorials for the ceremonies. Thousands on thousands of men, in uniform, shouldered their rifles and marched to the cemeteries.

Many times that number with poignant memories of valorous deeds joined with the veterans and stood before the cenotaph with moistened eyes in remembrance.

Official and special church services were held, while clergymen preached sermons appropriate to the occasion.

OTTAWA CEREMONY

It was beneath a leaden sky which matched the sombre occasion being observed, that Canada's capital yesterday paid homage to the memory of its war dead. Nearly 2,000 veterans paraded to the cenotaph on Parliament Hill, reinforced by an equal number of men from the Ottawa garrison.

Those witnessing the ceremony were estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000, while thousands more lined the streets to watch the march past of men who, in the hour of Canada's peril, had answered their country's call.

But the ceremony was saddened further by the death of one aged veteran, William Stuart, who had responded to the summons to service twenty years ago when more than sixty years of age, passed away a few minutes prior to the opening of the service.

The annual ceremony of consecration and remembrance was carried out in an atmosphere of deep solemnity.

Through crowded streets the veterans swung into the driveway from the drill hall, marching to Parliament Hill. At 3 o'clock the Governor-General arrived with the Prime Minister and members of the viceregal entourage.

For fifteen minutes prior to the 11th hour, the great boudoir of the carillon in the Peace Tower tolled its clangorous note. Beside the small enclosure reserved for the viceregal suite were hundreds of citizens bearing wreaths.

HYMNS SUNG

The service was brief. "O Canada" was sung, followed by the "Dead March" of Beethoven, and the "Hill and Lament." "The Land of the Living" was succeeded by the hymn "God, Our Help in Ages Past" and "Abide With Me."

The Governor-General placed a wreath, followed by the Prime Minister and by Hon. A. C. Hardy, who placed a symbol of the war in the absence of Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King.

At the close of the service the veterans re-formed, and marched past the Prime Minister, who stood at the entrance to the Parliament Buildings. The parade then returned to Carleton Square, where it was dismissed.

POPPY CAMPAIGN

Canadian Legion headquarters yesterday announced the poppy campaign this year had been an unqualified success. A total of $12,500 was realized, nearly $1,500 more than last year. When the purchase of the war-plate poppies is liquidated, the balance is applied to the relief of indi-

Report Made On Jobless Veterans

Unemployed Ex-service Men in Five Provinces Total
9,162

Canadian Press
Ottawa, Nov. 12.—Completing its survey of unemployment conditions among ex-service men, the Canadian Legion at the weekend issued figures for five of the nine provinces, showing a total of 9,162 workless veterans, with 21,822 dependents. The provinces surveyed were Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The survey was undertaken at the behest of the fifth Dominion convention held here last March, of which the unemployment committee was presided over by C. Grant McNeill of Vancouver. All provincial commands and branches of the legion co-operated in this work.

Of the unemployed veterans 6,150 served in France, 1,368 served elsewhere, and 1,717 were members of the imperial forces. The figures disclose that about 50 per cent of the workless returned men have been without jobs for four years or more, 2,185 have had no employment for three years, 1,471 for two years, and 849 for one year.

Of the total it is shown 4,366 were able to follow a trade, 4,150 are physically capable of engaging in light work, while 656 are permanently unemployable.

Approximately 6,000 of the veterans are on relief.

AGE GROUPS

The largest number of workless ex-service men come within the age group of thirty-six to forty years, this group having a total of 2,140. From forty years the numbers drop until there is a sharp decline from sixty-one years and over, the number being 467. It is noted there are war veterans as young as thirty-one years. Between that and thirty-five years the number of unemployed is 767.

By provinces the report shows Ontario as having the largest number of unemployed returned men, with 3,713 and 9,470 dependents. Manitoba has 2,462 with 4,945 dependents, Alberta 1,385 with 3,601 dependents, Nova Scotia 820 with 2,133 dependents, and Saskatchewan 782 with 1,673 dependents.

Mr. and Mrs. Dionne take a keen interest in everything pertaining to their daughters, and are compiling a scrapbook which will contain a history of the quintuplets from the day of their birth.

They have received thousands of messages and gifts since the children were born and tried at first to acknowledge them, but found the task too much for them and asked the Canadian Press to express their appreciation to all who had communicated with them.

Discussing a newspaper story that he and Mrs. Dionne desired to see the five girls become nuns when they grow up, Olive Dionne said it was foolish to look so far ahead. "It will be time enough to think about that in another twenty years," she said.

"Whatever they do it will be of their own accord," he added. He expressed a wish that the girls might stay in northern Ontario and become brides of French-Canadian farmers.

Mr. Dionne took the opportunity of denying, too, a report that he was not present when the babies were born. He said preparations had been made in their modest home for the reception of a new member of the family, but no idea existed of a multiple birth and consequently the preparations were not adequate.

Both parents accused their reluctance to discuss their famous youngsters with newspaper reporters by stating that before their children's birth they were entirely unused to publicity and a little bewildered by the whole affair. They desired, nothing more now than to be allowed to continue with their quiet, uneventful lives.

Life at their little farm has slipped back into its regular channel after an eventful summer. The approach of winter and the almost impassable condition of the road between their home and Callander have discouraged the flow of curiosity-seekers, so the family is able to carry on its usual routine without interference.

NEW PERAMBULATORS

Toronto, Nov. 12.—Dr. A. R. D'Arce's plea for carriages for the Dionne quintuplets at Callander has been heard and Edward D. Eichenlaub of Pittsburgh will supply the perambulators. He is head of the Eichenlaub furniture firm of Pittsburgh.

Eichenlaub heard of the carriage need while visiting Toronto to make purchases for his firm. He bought five additional carriages and will ship them to the quintuplets' northern Ontario home.

The carriages are of the English style and carry metal nameplates with the names of the five tiny girls.

FIFTEEN IN TWO BOATS DROWNED

Associated Press

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Nov. 12.—Authorities gave up hope to-day for Mexico's famous matador, Luis Freg, and fourteen friends, missing after two motor launches overturned Saturday during an outing off the coast of Campeche state.

About thirty persons were saved. A lengthy search was made for the missing, who included three matadors and several government officials. High waves overturned the boats.

JAPAN PLACES BIG METAL ORDER

Canadian Press

Tokio, Nov. 12.—It was "reliably understood here to-day that an order for 40,000 tons of metals, including 26,000 tons of tinplate, for Japan and Manchukuo, had been placed with British firms.

Julian Piggott, a member of Lord Barmby's mission representing the British Federation of Industries, is en route to Victoria and Vancouver, B.C., and although he was secretive regarding any business obtained, it is understood the metal order was placed.

Rumors Denied By the Dionnes

The interview was arranged over the week-end by the Dionne sisters, H. R. Valin of North Bay, Ont., at the request of the parents, who felt they could clear up a number of erroneous reports. The representative of the Canadian Press and The North Bay Nugget met Mr. and Mrs. Dionne near their home as they were turning there after visiting their five-and-a-half-month-old daughters at their private hospital.

Both parents expressed themselves as highly satisfied with the progress their children are making under the care of Dr. A. R. D'Arce and with the consideration being shown them by the guardians in charge of the babies.

WORLD STATE IS ENVISAGED

Prof. H. F. Angus and Hon. N. W. Rowell Address Vancouver Audience

Vancouver, Nov. 12.—Evolution of the world from anarchy and war through successive stages to creation of a world state and government by common consent, was envisaged by Prof. H. F. Angus of the University of British Columbia in a luncheon address to League of Nations Society on Saturday.

From international anarchy to maintenance of peace by the "honor system" (illustrated by the Kellogg Pact), to limitation of national sovereignty by hard and fast sanctions with the power to enforce them, to formation of a world state and international government, were the steps outlined by the speaker.

He said civilization had passed from the first to the second stage and he declared the next step must be the third—limitation of national sovereignty. He considered the ideal world state was politically impractical at present.

Prof. Angus was the first of a series of notable speakers to address a large gathering in Hotel Georgia in commemoration of Peace Day. He was followed by Hon. Newton W. Rowell, K.C., Prof. P. H. Soward, Percy Benough and Dr. N. P. Coleman of Reed College.

Speaking of the evolution, which he presented as an historical possibility, Prof. Angus continued: "The system of sanctions, or government by enforceable agreements, would break down without some form of world legislature and with such a legislature the system would be gradually replaced by the ideal of a genuine world state."

FAILURE OF LEADERS

Mr. Rowell, a member of Premier Borden's war-time cabinet, and former president of the Canadian Bar Association, castigated politicians and statesmen for misdirecting policy since the Great War.

"World conditions have been caused by the failure of the civilian leaders to settle the peace. The soldiers did not die in vain," he declared. "Have we learned the lessons of the war or are we prepared to drift again into war?" he asked. He added that "the future of civilization depends on the answer."

NEW U.S. FARM LEGISLATION

Wheat and Cotton Acreage Restriction Out; Domestic Allotment Plan

Washington, Nov. 12.—The new farm programme to be presented to the next congress by an Agricultural Adjustment Administration spokesman will turn sharply away from acreage restriction on the country's two great money crops—wheat and cotton.

Instead, Chairman Howard Jones, Texas Democrat, of the House Agriculture Committee, will be recommended a domestic allotment plan, by which the grower would be paid benefits only on that part of his production destined for consumption in the United States, being left free to produce as much as he may desire for the world market.

"A production basis should be established by local committees for each farm," Jones said. "Each farmer should be paid premiums on this production basis—in other words, on his portion of the domestic market. Then each farmer should be permitted to produce what he wishes to be sold in the markets of the world, but be separately deranged. No inquiry will be made of the domestic market."

Murder-Suicide Case in Manitoba

Altamont, Man., Nov. 12.—Murder and suicide to-day were the decision of police in investigating the violent death of Alphonse Verbrughe, a farmer living four miles west of here, and Sheldon Skinner, son of a neighboring farmer.

After investigation, Constable Thomas of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and Dr. Lamont, coroner, declared Skinner had shot Verbrughe to death and then committed suicide with the same gun, but separately deranged. No inquiry will be held.

Verbrughe was called to the door of his farm house Saturday evening and was shot down as he opened the door. Police found the body of Skinner half a mile from the Verbrughe home.

MR. PATTULLO'S SPEECH

THOSE WHO HEARD PREMIER PATULLO speak over the radio from his office in the Parliament Buildings on Friday night were provided with an interesting review of the conduct of public affairs since the present government assumed office a year ago. The material he presented, the numerous subjects with which he dealt, indicated that he had given much time and thought to the preparation of his address.

Mr. Pattullo is firmly of the opinion that the British North America Act should be amended without delay, and he is disappointed that the conference of provincial officials with the Dominion has been called off. How keenly he feels on this point was clearly shown when he told his invisible audience that British Columbia "does not propose to continue under the bondage to which it has been subjected ever since Confederation," for it has "taken the backwash long enough, and only the power of our superb resources has enabled us to make such headway as has taken place." Here are some other important points which the Premier emphasized:

The provincial budget will be balanced in the next fiscal year, apart from unemployment expenditures and sinking funds.

The government regards refunding of the provincial debt as "essential," for "money return should be in direct ratio to labor and commodity return, rather than, as now, in inverse ratio."

The jurisdiction of the Dominion and the provinces in social insurance, health services, marketing of natural resources, unemployment relief and taxation must be more clearly defined.

A national council should be appointed to study the whole problem of unemployment as it is "unthinkable that the present inadequate policy should be perpetuated."

An early general election should be held in Canada, for "until these questions are settled we can not determine permanent policy nor make the progress which is both desirable and possible."

The government is "just as determined as are municipal officers that assistance must be rendered to the municipalities," and municipal councils that are condemning the Prime Minister for refusing to see a municipal delegation recently "are acting either on misinformation or deliberately.... and we are not at all afraid that the goblins will get us if we don't watch out."

Balancing the provincial budget and refunding the provincial debt, of course, are very closely related policies. It is gratifying to learn from Mr. Pattullo that his Finance Minister will balance the budget in the next financial year, apart from unemployment expenditures. At present, on the basis of the last budget, the province has to find annually more than $11,000,000 to meet interest charges and sinking funds. Mr. Hart presented two refunding schemes in his last speech, the adoption of which would relieve the taxpayers of an annual interest charge of several million dollars. How soon he will be able to bring these schemes to fruition depends, of course, upon several considerations—for example, the willingness of the bondholders to come to his assistance and take less interest on their securities, as the holders of Dominion bonds recently did, the condition of the money market, and British Columbia's credit status.

As Mr. Pattullo very properly pointed out, "money return should be in direct ratio to labor and commodity return, rather than, as now, in inverse ratio. Provision should be made which will ensure a supply of money to carry out necessary and essential public services." If this were to be done he sees no reason why there should be such a large number of Canadian workers and their families on relief as there are at the present time, for necessary public works could be undertaken and considerable employment provided.

The Times thoroughly agrees, moreover, that the government at Ottawa should lose no time in establishing a national council to study unemployment. This, after all, is the Dominion's gravest problem and is likely to remain so until it receives more adequate treatment than is reflected by the present haphazard and most unsatisfactory method of doling out relief.

It can be taken for granted, too, that the great majority of the people of Canada share Mr. Pattullo's view that the electors at once should be given an opportunity to express themselves on the manner in which their business has been attended to at Ottawa since the summer of 1930.

HIGH SPEED AT LOW COST

TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS AGO THE late E. H. Harriman, United States railway magnate, rushed across this continent, a distance of 3,239 miles in 73 hours and 12 minutes, on a Union Pacific train. This record stood unchallenged until recently when the Union Pacific's six-car, streamlined, diesel-driven train covered 3,500 miles from Los Angeles to New York in 56 hours and 55 minutes. The Harriman train in 1906 made a special run that could not be matched day in and day out in commercial practice. But the performance of the new streamlined train shows what regular long-distance train journeys are likely to be. Speed in transportation has always been purchased by heavy expenditure in energy and, therefore, in fuel. For this reason extra fares must be charged for fast travel on both land and sea. But the cost of a trip on the new streamlined train will be low as compared with the price paid five years ago. On this record-breaking run 2,079 gallons of liquid fuel was consumed at a total cost of eighty-three dollars, nearly a third less than a single fare with berth, or 2.5 cents per mile.

On the basis of accommodation for one hundred and twenty-four passengers, the fuel cost amounts to be a fifth of a cent per each passenger mile. An equivalent conventional steam train would cost a sixteenth of a cent per passenger mile. In other words, the streamlined train as a whole is operated at a cost of fifty cents and the steam train at eighty-five cents per mile. In the light of these facts the Union Pacific's eleven streamlined trains which are to be operated in the near future may be expected to meet competition from big highway buses and automobiles.

In the east at the present time the Burlington Railway is running its crack streamlined train between two great metropolitan cities and has opened a new era in travel along its route. If the railways in the northern portion of the United States should adopt this new style train, in all probability Canada's two great systems would have to pursue a similar course, since this competition in speed and price could not be resisted successfully under existing conditions. We appear to be on the eve of a complete revolution in railroad transportation.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

CANADA'S EXPERIENCE WITH UNEMPLOYMENT during the last few years undoubtedly will eventually lead to a practical measure of unemployment insurance on a national scale. It had been supposed, of course, in the halcyon days before the beginning of the depression that a young country like this would not consider seriously any policy resembling the system in operation in Great Britain—quite incorrectly called a "dole." On the contrary, it is Canada, unfortunately, in the absence of a contributory plan, which has had to resort to the dole in its worst form. It has had to expend millions of dollars from the public treasury for which, in the main, there is practically nothing to show.

After all, the British system is a comparatively simple one, in which the worker, the employer, and the state contribute equal amounts. It may not be said that its operation has not got out of hand at times. A few years ago the unemployment fund went into debt very seriously and certain restrictions had to be applied to relief payments; but since then it has been restored to a sound condition and in many respects the cuts which had to be made temporarily have been restored. The following table of contributory payments speaks for itself:

Employers	Workers	State	Per Week
Men, 21 to 65.....	10d	10d	2s 6d
Women, 21 to 65....	9d	9d	2s 6d
Men, 16 to 21.....	9d	9d	2s 6d
Women, 16 to 21....	8d	8d	2s 6d
Boys, 16 to 18.....	5d	5d	1s 3d
Girls, 16 to 18.....	4½d	4½d	1s 1½d
Children, 14 to 16..	2d	2d	6d

Benefits paid out for the above contributions on the basis of thirty contributions having been made during the past two years are as follows:

Men between 21 and 65.....	17s	per week
Women between 21 and 65.....	15s	per week
Men between 16 and 21.....	14s	per week
Women between 16 and 21.....	12s	per week
Boys, 17 to 18.....	9s	per week
Girls, 17 to 18.....	7s 6d	per week
Boys, 16 to 17.....	6s	per week
Girls, 16 to 17.....	5s	per week
*Under 16.....	2s	per week
*Paid if father unemployed.
Dependents—Adult dependent.....	9s
—Each dependent child 2s

Under the British scheme the procedure may be explained this way: As soon as a person obtains employment in the insurable class he must obtain from the government employment office his unemployment "book" which he delivers to his employer. On leaving employment the man collects his book from his employer and deposits it with the government employment office, at the same time making application for unemployment insurance benefits. No benefits are allowed for the first week; this is known as the "waiting week."

The term "insurable class" refers to manual laborers—with the exception of agricultural workers and domestic servants—and white collar workers earning less than $250 (about $1,250) per year, also with a few exceptions in each class. Incidentally, while a man is drawing his unemployment benefits he may be required to accept any employment offered at his own trade in his own district, at the current rate of wages, and under current working conditions.

It is considered by all but a very small minority in Great Britain that unemployment insurance and other social services inaugurated in comparatively recent times have greatly improved working conditions and standards of living, that they have been the means of limiting social unrest to the minimum while serious economic changes were going on. Thus, if Canada is not to have a repetition of the experience of the last few years when the economic cycle produces another depression, it will be wise to prepare ahead.

THE ANEMEN
 The Toronto Mail and Empire

Nobody will be able to accuse the Hepburn government of inactivity as long as the Ontario civil service holds out.

MONTREAL FINANCES
 Le Soleil, Quebec

Because the municipal administration of Montreal asks the Quebec Legislature for more extensive taxation powers, some newspapers imagine that the provincial government is going to lend its credit to the metropolis in order to supplement the latter's financial insufficiency. That is an error which may well create a useless equivocal situation. On account of the prolonged and acute character of the unemployment crisis, the provincial government, like the federal, has come to the help of municipalities, assuming a large share of the cost of relief given, up to now, to the unemployed and their families. This contribution has been made without meddling in any way in the municipal administration. To-day, in addition to this, Montreal needs increased revenue to balance her ordinary municipal budget. It is therefore up to the administrators of the city of Montreal to suggest to the Legislature what means they will judge wisest and least vexatious for taxing their ratepayers further. The government of the province will meet their requests as far as possible, but there is no question of the provincial government's taking over the responsibility of the municipal administration either in imposing taxes or in administering the additional revenue derived therefrom.

Loose Ends

A moving story of Old Canada comes from Windsor, Ont.—but with a baffling lack of detail—things might be a lot worse, you know—The French prepare for some more fun—which is alarming to Mrs. Noggins.

By H. B. W.

CANADIAN SAGA

DID YOU EVER read anything so intriguing, yet so baffling, as that dispatch on the front page of this newspaper last week-end from Windsor, Ont.? It said simply, with an aggravating lack of detail, that a woman had been discovered with her child in a street car and the child's head was wedged tightly in a "bedroom utensil." At first the woman attempted to cover this remarkable phenomenon with a paper bag, but the child took the paper off, revealing the full wonder of the spectacle. The woman said she was going to a hospital to have the unusual headgear removed, and told the vulgar passengers in the street car who laughed at the unusual sight: "This is nothing to laugh at. This is serious."

Yes, I should rather think it was serious. But one is left completely in the dark as to the true inwardness of this strange and moving story. There must have been some good reason why that frantic mother could not break the bedroom utensil into small pieces with a sharp stroke of a hammer and remove it from the child's head. That, I have always understood, is the usual method in such cases—just a sharp tap, not too hard, but firm enough, and the job is done. An expert, they tell me, can finish it completely and save the child in less than a minute. But apparently this woman, for reasons of her own, was going to a hospital to have the child removed in pieces so as to save the bedroom utensil.

The utensil, it would seem, must have had more than a mere mercenary value to this poor woman. Some old sentimental value must have clung to it. Perhaps, who knows, it was a family heirloom, a piece of the fine old pioneer days in Ontario before our modern luxuries had destroyed the good old traditions of the race. The mind lingers on such a romantic story.

Perhaps it came over on the Mayflower with the ancestors of Calvin Coolidge and millions of others, and later accompanied the stout old United Empire Loyalists from the rebel colonies. Coming from Windsor, it may well have seen service in the war of 1812, at Lunenburg Lane, with Brock at Queenston's Heights. Or perhaps it was of rare china, hand-painted in the old days of craftsmanship, with red roses rambling about the rim, as they used to do when an unburied generation had time for these refinements, and possessed an appreciation of beauty which we have lost.

Yes, it is a romantic story, with a nostalgic touch to it which cannot fail to move anyone who knew the world when things were different, when life was simple and innocent. In this swift and modern metropolis, you never hear of such an occurrence. No children with such objects wedged on their heads are ever seen straggling along the streets of Victoria. The policeman at the corner of Yates and I'nglis is never confronted with a traffic problem of that kind. The charming antiquities of pioneer times are never displayed in this interesting fashion. Nothing exciting ever happens here.

MIGHT BE WORSE

SOMETIMES, HOWEVER, I think we have something to be thankful for even in this country, though considering how much better things might be if we used a little sense, they are aggravating enough. Ludwig Lewisohn, a noted American writer, who has been living in Europe for the last ten years, has just returned to the United States, and what he says about conditions across the line apply equally well here. After Europe, he says, America, for all its troubles, looks like paradise.

"In Europe," he says, "the physical facade of civilization is crumbling."

dirt and disorder gain daily ground; and bitterness, hatred and despair drive more and more men to plunge from mad theory to mad action, threatening to topple civilization down the slope of war into an unspeakable abyss. In America, where, to be sure, want and suffering have been of briefer duration—yet sudden and cruel—the entire structure of civilization is as complete as ever and men still surmount their difficulties with a kind of strenuous cheer and unobtrusive gallantry. "This is the precise kind of virtue in our people and our polity that makes for a humane civilization and it is the precise kind of virtue which the European nations are losing. In Europe the appeal is to force and fanaticism. Where reason and decency still prevail, men like Oswald Mosley, organizations like the Croix de Feu, batter ineffectually at their gates."

Mr. Lewisohn tells of the first meeting he attended on landing in America, a gathering of American Liberals who spent the evening shooting holes through Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal. But what these Liberals didn't realize, he says, was that no one here realizes, is that in Europe they wouldn't be allowed to speak like this at all. If they did, they would be looked up. If you were to breathe in Europe the sentiments which you daily utter about the Bennett Government, for example, you would find yourself on a diet of bread and water. Mr. Woodworth probably would be assassinated. The local branch of the C.C.F. could be liquidated. The leaders of the youth movement would disappear. Mr. Gerry McGee would be hanged. I would form an interesting appendage to a lamp post. You couldn't say a word about the Pattullo Government. Think twice before you throw these priceless privileges away.

SONS OF FREEDOM

MRS. NOGGINS was discussing these very matters with me on the way to town this morning. "Well," she said, "I see they've got to understand them Frepiches, you know. Seems like whenever they ain't got nothing to do and is bored, they rush out and get themselves a new government, just like that young Mrs. Boggs next door to me rushes into town and gets a new 'at whenever she 'as a fight with her 'usband. Only she can't afford one as frequent as they get a government over there. Gosh, this 'ere 'at of mine (the one with the white daisies on it) 'as lasted longer than the last fifty French governments, I guess."

"Not only that, but I read in the paper what came around the garbage for the chickens from Mrs. Boggs, you know, that they 'expected' more trouble and rioting in the streets over there. Seems like whenever the Frepiches got nothing 'else to do they 'ave a riot, just like you might 'ave a game of bridge. I 'sposed a feller over there 'd say to 'is gal, 'listen, sweetie,' 'ell say, 'let's go riotin' this evening,' and the gal will say, 'Sure, that's fun—if it don't rain, of course.' 'Yus, and when a couple of feller get together over a bottle of beer, one of 'em 'all 'as to say, 'Let's 'ave a little revolution for liberty and freedom this evening!' 'ell say, 'It's a fine starlight evening' for it," 'ell say, and before you know it the 'streets 'as runnin' with blood."

"It's funny. Over there in France they can't make their governments stay put. They're always a-quittin' on 'em. An' over 'ere we can't make 'em quit. Well, I darsay this is the best way. I darsay we'd find it kind of

GO TO SLEEP
 Go to sleep now, and forget
 Let the darkness blot away
 All the vexing cares of day.
 Let the moonlight creep through
 Broad magnolia leaves to you,
 Dreams from fairy lands will drift,
 Bearing many a longed-for gift.
 Go to sleep now; set aside
 Thoughts of every hope that died.
 Sleep can bring you perfect peace,
 As though soul could gain release
 For a while from weary flesh.
 And the strange world's maddening mesh.
 Sleep and you by
 Every sorrow, every sigh.

Twenty-five Years Ago To-day

THE VICTORIA DAILY TIMES

NOVEMBER 12, 1909

(From The Times Files)

All is quiet so far at the scene of the Indian outbreak in the vicinity of Hazelton, B.C. F. B. Hussey, superintendent of Provincial Police, received reports as to the situation this morning, and stated that it was satisfactory.

The most successful Sunday School convention that has ever been held in this city was concluded last night with a mass meeting of the Sunday school workers in St. Andrew's.

The parents of children who attend the city schools are to be asked to express an opinion on the desirability of extending the noon recess hour from an hour to an hour and a half, and the half-hour would be added on to the afternoon time. This matter came up at the school board meeting last night.

A rather curious coincidence happened this morning when the French barque Max sailed up the Strait, closely following the Wray Castle, which arrived last night. Both vessels are consigned to the same company and will go on to Vancouver, the tug Lorne towing both over this evening.

Over 3,000 children are in attendance at the various public schools in the city, an excellent showing for this season of the year. The percentage of attendance is very high, being 90.64, and over half of the total enrolment are credited with perfect attendance, the figures being 1,574.

Forecast—For thirty-six hours ending 5 p.m. Saturday: Victoria and vicinity—Light to moderate winds, mostly cloudy, with showers.

WARNING!

The Times urges its correspondents to restrict their contributions to 500 words. It positively will not print lengthy communications.

These letters must be plainly written on one side of the paper only, and must be accompanied by the names and addresses of the writers, not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith.

Letters will not be re-written for publication. If they are not legible no attempt will be made to read them. Letters not used will not be returned to the writers. Letters containing offensive personal reflections will not be printed. Rules, which henceforth will be carried out absolutely, are designed as much for the protection of our patient readers as for that of The Times.

BUFOONERY!

To the Editor:—There is nothing better to attract a crowd to an open air gospel meeting (of which we attend many on Saturdays, Sundays and during our holidays) than a drunken sot, come with the intention to disturb, he himself defeats his own object, for his very buffooneries, which are soon spent, gives us a much larger crowd to speak to about the love of God the Father, the grace of God the Son and the strivings of God the Holy Spirit with "every man that cometh into the world." So it happened with your anonymous and self-styled correspondent, (who, by the way, while not daring to use his own name, abuses that of one who dares to use his (for he has made many more people look up the paper of November 7 in which our letter, "Princess Juliana," was published, to find out that the letter of your physically "fat and fed" but otherwise "lean and hungry" correspondent has no "raison d'être.")

Not to sign one's name brings every one under suspicion; it is a cowardly act! It is a very easy matter to get the laughs on one's side, and the more stupid the remarks, the greater the roar! We do not mind to appear, or even to be made, a fool for Christ for "the servants are not greater than their Master." Who suffered so much decision, indignity, yes, even the death of the Cross, for our sakes! To be a fool for Christ is infinitely better than to be a fool for Satan. NEW MAPS OF PENINSULA OUT

Pocket Editions of North and South Sections of Saanich Printed

Residents of Vancouver Island will be interested to learn that two up-to-date maps covering the whole of the Saanich Peninsula have been completed by Joseph B. Davenport and published by the Island Blue Print and Map Company, Sayward Building.

This area has been divided into two sections, the northerly and the southerly. The northerly section includes all of the peninsula lying north of Brentwood and the southerly section from Brentwood to Victoria.

These maps are in pocket form on a scale of half a mile to the inch, the size of each section being twenty-five inches by fifteen, having been reduced from a large scale wall map. On them are shown all subdivisions of land as filed in the Land Registry Office together with the official plan numbers. Other features include roads with names, ferry landings, railways, creeks, lakes and original sections with their numbers and ranges. Aerial photographs have been used where land surveys are not available with the result that the maps are more reliable in the outlying areas.

The Island Blue Print and Map Co. has already published a series of these maps of the various districts of southern Vancouver Island on exactly similar lines, and these two now make available up-to-date copies of all areas south of Westholme.

FIRST CATHEDRAL TROOP

On Friday the First Cathedral Scouts held their weekly meeting. Duty Patrol Leader B. Harrison broke the flag, after which the following received badges: D. Nelson, R. Heddie and A. Batey, their friend to animals; A. Holder and D. Oddy, their second class; J. Beckerleg, his pathfinder, and C. Postinger, his cyclist. Inspection of the various patrols was carried out by S. M. R. White and was followed by twenty minutes of instruction. During this period the Star Patrol (composed of the senior scouts) was given some hints on Morse signalling by Sgt. McKay. An investiture ceremony was then performed, during which Vincent Martin and Arthur Best were made members of the troop. The First Cathedral Troop has the honor of supplying the color party on Sunday, and First Class Scouts J. W. Ashdown-Green and B. Ruffell were detailed as flag bearers with King's Scouts A. Batey and D. Nelson as escort. The troop will also attend the service at the Cenotaph on Sunday morning, while an all-day hike will be held on Monday. As many scouts as possible are asked to attend the two services on Sunday.

Entertainment

By Odd Fellows

Father and Son Banquet Will Be Held Friday

An event of unusual interest is billed for Friday night, when the three Victoria lodges of the Independent Order of Oddfellows will stage a father and son entertainment at their headquarters, Douglas Street, commencing at 8 o'clock.

An energetic committee under the direction of Bro. Fred Landsberg have completed a fine programme, which includes boxing, wrestling, gymnastic display, vocal and instrumental selections, etc., to which all members of the three lodges are invited to attend, accompanied by the male members of the family, or some juvenile friend, between the ages of twelve and twenty years, who would be possibly interested in the work of this fraternal and benevolent society.

The concluding item of the programme and probably the most interesting from a young man's viewpoint, will be the refreshments, which have been placed in the capable hands of Bro. Ed. Combes. The committee extends a welcome to all members to attend.

The treasurer for the Colwood district will be in attendance at the Colwood store from 1 p.m. to 10 p.m., on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday this week, November 13, 14 and 15, to receive additional corrections, etc., to the new Dominion list of electors for the district.

District Community Chest at Courtenay

Courtenay, Nov. 12—A well represented meeting of the District Community Chest was held in the city hall Tuesday evening, when the auditors' report was read and a detailed statement given by the president of all expenditures for the current year. The duties of officers followed. W. Douglas being elected to the office of president and F. Field, secretary.

Mr. Douglas pointed out that the organization was primarily for the purpose of providing hampers of groceries for needy families at Christmas time. It soon became apparent that the duties of the organization did not cease with the end of the holidays. Requests for children's boots and clothing kept coming in all throughout the year, and after careful investigation by responsible individuals or organizations these cases were attended to. Quantities of boots, underwear and all sorts of clothing were purchased by the organization and distributed. Destitute transients were supplied with meals at the expense of the community chest, and in some cases medicine and medical attention was provided for. Faced with these facts and realizing the need of an organization capable of dealing with all such cases promptly and efficiently, it was unanimously agreed after all present had expressed their view that greater care be exercised in the distribution of Christmas hampers in order that more funds be available for the purchase of boots and clothing during the year. Rev. Bryce Wallace, who has been closely associated with community chest work, gave an interesting talk on such activities in the mountain regions of British Columbia.

Mrs. Stewart Hutchinson read the secretary's report, as prepared for the W.I.C. Miss B. Hall and Mrs. S. Hutchinson and Mrs. H. A. Baxter were thanked for the report on the conference. A letter was read from Miss W. Wilkie, district nurse, reporting the opening of a clothing club in Langford, and asking the co-operation of the members in this matter. A slipper bee will be held at the home of Mrs. L. Hutchinson, Glen I. ke, on Thursday, November 15, at 2 p.m. Ladies are requested to take along old felt hats to be made in to slippers. It was decided to send fifteen cents per capita to the district board this year. A card party will be held in the hall November 18 at 8 p.m. under the auspices of the W.I. Bridge and five hundred will be played. The convener are Mrs. A. Hobbs, Mrs. H. A. Baxter, Mrs. F. Goodsell and Miss B. Hall. Your Baby and Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Quite in line with the mother's natural desire to see her child gain properly, should go a sensible recognition that if the child is really being managed by undernourishment there will be some signs in addition to the underweight. People say quite solemnly that their children do not eat a thing, that they never want to eat—and in the next breath proclaim that they are not underweight, sleep well, and look well.

In such cases one knows that nothing much can be wrong. It is the parents themselves who have some distorted idea of how much a child should eat—or are expecting from a child the adult's articulate delight about food, and his assertions of "being starved."

CHECK WEIGHT AGAINST AGE

Of course there are chronic types of appetitelessness for which there should be some correction. The baby who never has an appetite and must be fed when asleep may well be in need of some glandular medication rather than drastic changes from one food to another.

In the following case the baby's weight seems too low until measured against its "real age," which is only about four months.

"I have a baby who was a seven and one-half months' premature," writes Mrs. H. I.

SYMPTOMS OF HEALTH

"She weighed six pounds at birth, and now, at five and one-half months, weighs eleven and one-half pounds. She takes eleven ounces of evaporated milk, thirteen of water, and three and one-half tablespoons of corn syrup. She gets cod liver oil, orange juice and a little cereal.

"She seldom cries, sleeps well, has active bowels and a good color. We had her in the hospital for nine weeks, off and on, trying to get her to eat. I know she needs more food but she will not take it. Could I give her goat's milk, and what would the formula be?"

Your present formula is a very good one. The same formula in goat's milk would be: Twenty-two ounces of goat's milk (bottled then measured), thirteen ounces of water and three and one-half tablespoons of syrup. You can see that all you have increased is the amount, since eleven ounces of evaporated milk has as much nourishment as twenty-two ounces of fresh milk.

WILL MARRY FOR $12,000

Washington Girl Seeks Middle-aged Husband; Wants Cash in Advance

Associated Press
Washington, Nov. 12.—For $12,000 in hand, Gloria Roberts will marry the first middle-aged man of reasonable qualities who offers himself. She put the question in this way: "Do you know of a middle-aged gentleman who would be willing to marry a cultured young woman who is an expert stenographer, an excellent nurse, a good cook and most entertaining company, and who would pay her five years' salary in advance?"

She is now earning $3,600 per annum in a secretarial position. She can furnish references of highest type.

"Please have this letter published." There is no Gloria Roberts listed in any of the various directories relating to Washington, but there is, for the time being, at least, a young woman who answers to that name.

Fingering bright new gloves in the lobby of a hotel, she explained it this way:

"You see, I have a good job—that is for a woman. I've got to keep until this other goes through. I certainly can't lose the job."

"You see it's like this—"

And she related a story of a father and mother who had brought up and educated a family, cared for them until the boys were self-sustaining and the girls married. All but Gloria Roberts.

She went ahead to tell about a depression that closed banks and left property burdened with debt and taxes.

"I suppose there is always one in every family on whom falls the duty of helping," she added. "Boys can't. They have families of their own. Married daughters can't. So, I've been doing all I can."

"Mother is ill. She is going to need a very expensive treatment soon. I've already borrowed all I can. What I want to see them out safely situated so that they won't have any more worries."

WEDDINGS
LYALL-BARON

A quiet wedding ceremony was performed at the First United Church on Friday, November 9, when the Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson united in marriage Lillian Jane, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Baron, to Robert Douglas Lyall, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Lyall, Hollywood Crescent. The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Lisa Baron, the best man being Mr. Russell Lyall, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 1111 Spruce Avenue, the rooms being tastefully decorated with a profusion of autumn flowers. The bride and groom received the best wishes of their friends standing beneath a lovely floral bell. Mr. E. Paver, an old friend of the family, proposed a toast to the young couple.

Among the many beautiful gifts received was an electric waffle iron and clock from the staff of Jameson's Motors, where the groom is employed, and a pretty tea-set and vases from the staff of the Capitol Theatre, where the bride has been employed for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Lyall will make their home in Victoria.

WOOSTER-RUTLEDGE

Two well-known young people were the principals at the pretty ceremony at St. Mary's Church, Saturday evening, when Rev. Canon A. E. de L. Summa united in marriage Evelyn Vivian, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Rutledge, 720 Vancouver Street, and Mr. Lawrence Arthur Wooster, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. Wooster of Victoria. P. T. C. Wickes presided at the organ, and during the signing of the register, Miss Dolly Rutledge, sister of the bride, sang "O Perfect Love." A large congregation witnessed the ceremony.

The church was attractively decorated with autumn flowers. The bride was given in marriage by her father and made an attractive figure in her floor length gown of eggshell satin fashioned with flared skirt, the bodice having a cowl neck and long tight sleeves, buttoned below the elbow. Her veil was attached to a crown of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses, carnations and swansons.

Mrs. J. Pugh of Gordon Head, was matron of honor, in a handsome frock of maize flat crepe trimmed with brown and a small brown felt hat and lace veil. She carried a sheaf of pale yellow chrysanthemums, and the flower girl was four-year-old Evelyn Leckie, niece of the bride, in a long frock of mauve organdy and a tight cap of pearls. She carried a Victorian posy of violets and white bebs chrysanthemums. Mr. John Pugh was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Peter Wakeman and Mr. Clifford Rutledge.

The reception was held at the home of Mrs. Rutledge, in a gown of navy blue and a small blue hat, being assisted in receiving by Miss Edith Wooster, sister of the groom, in black flat crepe, trimmed with net, and a black candy cloth hat. They both wore corsage bouquets of roses and carnations. The bride and groom stood beneath a white archway decked with flowers, from which was suspended a large white bell to receive the good wishes of their friends. Later, supper was served from a table arranged with pink and white roses and chrysanthemums and centered with the three-tiered cake.

After a honeymoon in Vancouver and Seattle, Mr. and Mrs. Wooster will make their home at 2435 Mudge Street, Oak Bay. The bride is a rock of French blue silk crepe, a black fur-trimmed overcoat and a candy cloth hat and veil.

Guests at the wedding included Mrs. A. Morton of Vancouver, and Mrs. E. Evans of Duncan, sister of the bride. Among the wedding gifts was a silver tea service from the bride's former associates on the staff of P. W. Woolworth Co. Ltd.

Many of the finest Indian dogies have been adapted by Miss Ravenhill for the beautiful rugs, in the making of which she is an adept, and her address promises to be intensely interesting.

Among the guests registered at the Dominion Hotel are: Mr. J. K. Leonard, Vancouver; Mr. A. E. West, Washington; Mr. Marie L. Spray, Monroe; Mrs. Marie L. Spray, Monroe; Mr. A. An interesting wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church, Esquimalt, on Saturday afternoon, when Rev. Canon H. G. The wedding march was played by Miss Peggy White.

HITS OUT AT MALE CRITICS

Montreal Feminist Takes Up Cudgels For Women in Jobs

Canadian Press
Montreal, Nov. 12.—Womenhood has flung its gauntlet in the face of those who preach woman's place to be in the home and not in the factory, store or office.

Miss Idola Saint Jean, Montreal feminist leader, did the flinging in a public address Saturday night. The gauntlet was performed with pungent barbs, among others, "absurdity has obviously not said its last word."

Who, she wondered, would provide homes and livelihood for the 865,919 women in Canada who are wage and salary earners if those who blame them for the economic crisis and want to drive them out of employment have their way?

She upheld the right of women to earn their living by employing their talents in those spheres of activity for which they felt qualified.

Most women, she continued, worked out of necessity, and not, as advanced, merely to keep them in luxuries.

Princess Marina to Arrive in London November 21 For Wedding

Canadian Press
London, Nov. 12.—The word "obey" is included in the marriage service for the Duke of Kent, the King's youngest son, and Princess Marina of Greece.

The actual marriage service is the ordinary Anglican office for the solemnization of matrimony and the word obey is included in the vows the Princess will take at Westminster Abbey, where Dean Foxley Norris will officiate.

The King and Queen, and the Prince of Wales, will accompany the Duke of Kent to Victoria Station on November 21 to meet the Princess on her return to England. They will drive with her to Buckingham Palace, where the Princess will stay with her parents, Prince and Princess Nicholas, until the wedding on November 29.

A choir of seventy will sing an anthem specially composed by Dr. Bullock, the Abbey organist, at the ceremony. This choir includes the Abbey choir, the "children gentlemen" of the Chapel Royal, and choristers of the King's Chapel at Windsor.

School children all over the country will be given a holiday, and there is a suggestion afoot that the day be proclaimed a general holiday.

The couple are expected to lease a furnished house in Belgrave Square.

The Clue of The Forgotten Murder

By CARLETON KENDRAKE
Copyright, 1934, NEA Service Inc.

The cab came to a stop.

"This," said Griff, "is the hotel where Mary Briggs is registered under the name of Stella Mockley. Or perhaps her real name is Stella Mockley and the name that she gave the police was one which was assumed for the occasion."

"At least," Bleeker said with more than a trace of impatience in his tone as he thrust a bill into the outstretched hand of the cab driver, "we will get something definite here, not merely a mass of philosophies and theories."

"We are," Griff admitted, "approaching the end of our chase. Soon we will have all the strands in our hands and then we can see the direction in which these strands are pointed—a direction which, I think, must have been deduced from only the single straw which we know was in his possession. It is uncanny. It is, in short, unbelievable. I still think there must have been something of luck that entered into it, although, when one sees it, it is so absolutely simple that one wonders it did not crash home to the consciousness long before. That is the way with vital things. They are usually simple, usually plainly visible, camouflaged only by the lack of vision in the mind of the beholder."

Bleeker, apparently without listening, pushed on past the criminologist and barged through the swinging door of the hotel.

"Caution," Griff whispered. "Let us not rush in here, my friend. . . ."

Griff paused by the doorway. Bleeker looked, followed the direction of his gaze, and also paused.

A big man with stooped shoulders was standing in the administration of the desk. Bleeker's eyes alighted for a moment in an attempt to refresh his memory. Then he muttered in an undertone, "That's Charles Fisher—Mrs. Cathay's lawyer."

"Over this way quickly," said the criminologist. "Perhaps he hasn't seen us."

He stepped behind a potted palm, dragging the publisher with him.

The two men stood motionless. Fisher did not once glance in their direction but finished his conversation with the man at the desk. He stood for a moment, apparently undecided. Then, flinging his chin up as one does when reaching a decision to plunge boldly into some unwelcome situation, he strode toward the elevators.

Griff squeezed the publisher's elbow.

"Quick," he said. "We can't give him the advantage."

The two men crossed the hotel lobby, their feet pouncing the tiled floor with quick impatience. Their gait was almost a run.

An elevator door slid open. Two women and a man got out. Fisher stepped in. The elevator operator looked out toward the lobby in a perfunctory survey and then placed his left hand on the door, preparatory to sliding it shut.

Griff gave a shrill whistle. The startled elevator operator looked at the two men hurrying across the lobby.

"Hold it," said Griff.

The elevator boy held the door open.

Fisher, who had been staring at the toes of his shoes in frowning concentration, looked up with annoyance stamped on his countenance. The annoyance gave place to surprise, the surprise to a friendly smile, and then the smile faded, as an expression of annoyance once more came across his features.

"Well, well," he said. "Griff and I are here. How are you, gentlemen? You're going up?"

"Yes," said Griff, and pushed his way in the elevator, shaking hands with the attorney.

The elevator boy slid to door shut.

"Ninth floor," said the lawyer.

"Ninth for us," Griff said.

The elevator shot upward.

"What brings you to the city?" asked Griff.

"Oh, just a matter of routine business. I've got to see about taking the deposition of a witness in a will case. Wasn't it unfortunate about poor Frank?"

"Cathay, you know?"

identity. If you'll pardon me, I'm dressing."

The door slammed.

Fisher stood for a moment as though undecided what course to pursue, then shrugged his shoulders, turned and walked down the corridor toward the two men who were waiting at the elevator.

The lawyer's smile held just the proper amount of apologetic sheepishness.

"Not often," he said, "that my deductives make a mistake like that. I keep the best firm in the city and they chase down witnesses and addresses for me. This was just one of those unusual and unfortunate circumstances of a similarity in names."

He pushed his finger on the bell-button for the elevator.

"You're going down?" asked Griff.

The lawyer nodded.

"You were mentioning something about insurance," Griff said. "Who is the beneficiary under Cathay's insurance policies?"

"The wife, Mrs. Cathay," the lawyer said.

"She's also beneficiary under the will, but there are certain provisions in the will that I didn't like," Fisher said.

"Can you discuss them?" Griff asked.

"It might be a little irregular," Fisher told him. "But I don't mind telling you that the one I objected to most strenuously was the gift to his chauffeur. A matter of $15,000 in cash."

"He was quite attached to his chauffeur?"

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders.

"You can draw your own conclusions," he said.

"How long had the chauffeur been with him?"

"Not quite a year."

"Griff frowned.

"Isn't that rather unusual?" he said.

"It is most unusual," the lawyer said.

"I am wondering," said Griff with his eyes narrowed, "if perhaps the gift in the will was not to insure silence on the part of the chauffeur, concerning some fact about which he might have known, rather than because of friendship?"

The elevator came to the ninth floor.

"You," said the lawyer, "are at liberty to draw your own conclusions. And," Griff said slowly, his eyes alighted thoughtfully, "if I had been tricked into making any such provisions in a will I would dislike to be careless about leaving medicine around that is, medicine that I was going to take. Fifteen thousand dollars in cash might be quite a temptation to the average chauffeur."

The lawyer stepped into the elevator, bowed formally.

"Gentlemen," he said, "you both have the privilege of reading my mind, but you will both remember that I have made no expression of opinion concerning the subject matter of our discussion."

The elevator door slammed shut and dropped down the shaft watching the arrow of the indicator.

"We'll see what floor he stops at," he said.

The floor of the indicator came to the seventh floor and paused.

Griff raced for the stairs.

"Come on," he said.

The men ran down two flights of stairs, came out in the corridor of the seventh floor, looked upon and down the corridor. There was no sign of the lawyer. They ran to the right and looked to the left. The lawyer was just entering a room.

"This," he said, "is going to be good."

Upon swift, noiseless feet he led the way to the room into which the attorney had disappeared and tapped on the door.

There was a moment of silence. Then there sounded surreptitious rustlings, the hissing of a whisper. Griff knocked again.

A young woman opened the door, staring at them with alert, dark eyes.

"Miss Mockley," asked the criminologist.

She nodded.

"We want to talk with you," said Griff, "and the fact that Mr. Fisher is also here doesn't matter in the least."

SISTERS SINGING TO-NIGHT

It is hardly necessary to say that these lovely young ladies are sisters. They are: Ina, Meta and Jean Bell of Calgary, who entertain radio listeners on the Canadian Radio Commission's western network every Monday night. Ina and Meta gained their professional experience on the stage and in entertainments for service clubs and conventions. The youngest sister, Jean, joined them in radio work about a year ago. Dyle Stewart provides instrumental accompaniment for them in their sprightly variety programmes and does the musical arrangements.

IGNORANCE WAS BLISS FOR HIM

On United States election night, John S. Young, 14 Radio City, was on a dance programme from the Hotel Montclair to announce that the democrats were sweeping the country. "Alas! It is a Shame," said Howard Clancy, announcing the next dance number from the hotel, unaware that the programme had been interrupted for a few seconds by the bulletin from Radio City which he could not hear.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES

ESQUIMALT UNITED

The Young People's Society of the Esquimalt United Church held its regular weekly meeting in the gymnasium on Wednesday, November 7, when "Will Take Care of You," opened the meeting, followed by a prayer by Rev. Anderson. The society is trying to raise funds towards buying new hymn books and as a starter will hold a concert on Friday, November 16, at 8 p.m. The young people will hold a Christmas service on Sunday, December 23, at 7.30, as a special feature. It was decided to ask St. Paul's A.Y.P.A. to a social on Wednesday, November 28, the refreshment committee to be Mrs. Barker and Mrs. Hughes, and the games committee to be Misses M. and H. Roode. Mr. Young gave a very interesting address on "Evolution," and the meeting closed with the singing of "Softly and Tenderly." The next meeting will be in charge of Mrs. Hughes who has for a guest speaker, Frank Tuppman. Dr. W. O. Nurse of Toronto, who has been spending a few days as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Roode of Esquimalt, will return east to his home to-morrow.

ST. MICHAEL'S

St. Michael's A.Y.P.A. held a business meeting recently in the parish hall, Royal Oak. The president, H. Oldfield, occupied the chair. Plans are rapidly going forward for the bazaar (Carnival of Clowns), which will be held on December 4. It was decided to allocate money to buy Christmas presents for children ministered to by the Columbia Coast Mission. The executive has arranged a special programme for the next meeting on November 22.

ARMS INQUIRY IS ADVOCATED

Canadian Press
Toronto, Nov. 12.—Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, came in for criticism when Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, vice-president of the Dominion command of the Canadian Legion, and prominent lawyer, delivered an address here during the week-end.

Lieut.-Col. Drew, former Ontario securities commissioner, attacked the Foreign Secretary for refusing to start an investigation into armament sales, similar to the recent one held in Washington by a committee of the United States senate.

At the annual dinner of the University Veterans' League, Lieut.-Col. Drew said such refusal was implied in Sir John's speech before the British Commons last Thursday. When Lieut.-Col. Drew called for an exhaustive inquiry in Great Britain's arms traffic, the 250 veterans present gave him unanimous support.

A resolution was passed asking the Canadian government to inform the British administration of the League's wish for "an effective inquiry to determine the best method of the production and distribution of armaments and war supplies within the British Empire, so that, while meeting efficiently the Empire's military, naval and air requirements, all possible will be done to remove the suspicion that now exists in regard to the activities of private armament manufacturers."

Yearning of Debutantes Cause of Mannequin War

New York, Nov. 12.—The mock war between the Park Avenue exhibitionists and the professional models of Flatbush, has been providing no end of amusement—and lots of dandy publicity for everybody involved.

The clothes horse, or fillies, of both society and the working classes are pleased to find their pictures in most of the newspapers and magazines, together with neatly-phrased opinions, attributed to themselves, concerning the alleged ruthlessness of wealthy postboys who are cutting down a mannequin out of jobs.

It has all reached the silly stage at which representatives of smart shops engaging society models (with or without pay) are telephoning the professionals so that they may organize picket lines when fashion shows are being held. Result: crowds, police, excitement, and everybody's name (including the names of the shops) in the papers.

PROPAGANDA

Fact is, too, that the whole controversy originated in the agile mind of a fellow named Bert Nevins, who is presently a student at the University of the South. Under the sky-gazing of this propagandist, the work-a-day model decided with fetching indignation that the blue-blood girls were stealing the sables off their backs, if not the eaves from their mouths.

And so we have one of those incongruous situations in which the richly dressed are being sternly reminded that they had better remember their place—remaining, if not rich, at least idle.

It strikes some observers, any way, that the motives of working society girls have been misinterpreted long enough. We have been told that they have wearied of purposeless lives and giddy rounds of pleasure; that they wish to justify their existence in the busy world, and do big, constructive deeds for the benefit of mankind. Wealth does not mean happiness—and so on, and on. Achievement—that is what these giddy girls crave.

FUN IN WORK

All that, if one may say so, is just so much pater de fols gar, or goose-liver. The harsh truth is that the debutantes have observed that wage-slaves have fun.

And they do have fun, these models and night-club singers, secretaries, smart-shop clerks and department-store buyers. Some of them get tickets to all the shows, and chaperoned business trips to Europe. They meet lots of interesting people—people one does not meet in drawing-rooms or private parties. They move, stars, scandal-tipped playboys, snappy Broadway comedians and college heroes.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRLS

So it is little wonder that the plumpered, hampered Park Avenue lassies believe that it must be just too, too divine to have a nice little apartment of one's own. And a ducky acquaintance of one's own, choosing. You see, there are negative considerations. Formal calls can be pretty dull. Dukes and princes can be paunchy or bald, or both. Blue-blooded bachelor millionaires can be stupid. Seldom in a lifetime do really good catches come along—such as Bill Plankington, who has $5,000,000 left from a mid-west packing fortune, and who dances the rumba, or Jimmy Burden, who besides being rich and affable, is a friend of the Prince of Wales.

Even when good catches do appear, they become so adroit at dodging match-making mamas that they usually wind up in bewildered bachelorhood. That was an idle threat the mannequins made about stealing the socialites' boy-friends if the socialites keep on taking modeling jobs. Professional models do not want any Park Avenue boy-friends, thank you.

Members of New York's Four Thousand have been contending plaintively that they need the money from jobs quite as much as do the regular m.d.s. Maybe so. Marjorie Oelrichs—almost supports herself. Mrs. Langdon Post gives part of her wages to charity. So does Eva Symington, a blue-blooded night-club singer. M. V. Taylor has earned enough to— for "ama lessons. And Lucie Brook has done sufficient, well to continue with her "tting and sculpture. Could bad old mannequins e painting and dramatics "luxuries." When poor little debutantes are starving for excretion?

Cadboro Sea Scouts W.A.—The Cadboro Bay Sea Scouts W.A. will hold another of their popular dances on Friday, Nov. 16, in St. Luke's Hall, Cedar Hill, also a whist card party on November 22 in their temporary quarters, Hobbs Road, Cadboro Road. The money raised by the dances and card parties is used on the boys' wages to charity. So does Eva Symington, a blue-blooded night-club singer. M. V. Taylor has earned enough to— for "ama lessons. And Lucie Brook has done sufficient, well to continue with her "tting and sculpture. Could bad old mannequins e painting and dramatics "luxuries." When poor little debutantes are starving for excretion?

Victoria's building moved at least temporarily out of its slump this week, according to permits taken out at the city building inspector's office.

Two major construction projects accounted for a new value of $6,500, while three others in triple figures pushed it to $8,150, without smaller items being taken into consideration. A house remodeling project, valued at $700, was undertaken by R. W. Payne, contractor, for W. Hipwood's home, at the corner of Sayward Avenue and Pembroke Street.

The sum of $350 was entered for the construction of a glass porch at 118 Howe Street, and $500 for additional rooms at 417 Vancouver Street.

In addition to those was the erection of a $9,500 dwelling in Centerville Place.

Solemn Rites Mark Day Of Remembrance

Many Thousands Attend
Simple Ceremony Before
Cenotaph Yesterday

The people of Victoria flocked in their thousands to the Cenotaph yesterday morning to pay tribute to those who fell in the Great War.

They stood with bare heads on the roadway where others had passed as they marched down to the ships which were to carry many of them away from Victoria for the last time.

As the pipes of the Canadian Regiment marched the militia detachments down Government Street towards Parliament Square thirty minutes before the service, there were already several thousands gathered around the Cenotaph and in the adjacent streets.

The militia were followed by detachments from the Royal Canadian Navy, the permanent force, the sea militia, and the Victoria Harbour Battalion of veterans, headed by their band, formed up beside the Empress Hotel and marched around Parliament Square, coming to a halt with their heads beside the memorial.

At the eleventh hour a gun boomed across the inner harbor, heads were bowed and a complete hush fell on the great throng. A gentle breeze blew the acid fumes of cordite across the silent crowd.

The gun roared again, and the whole concourse joined with one voice in the singing of "O Canada."

Square thirty minutes before the service, there were already several thousands gathered around the Cenotaph and in the adjacent streets.

Men from the navy, Canadian Scottish, Fifth Brigade and 11th Machine Gun Battalion in war-like helmets, rifles, bayonets, and fixed bayonets, less, at the four corners of the Cenotaph.

The great crowd joined again in the singing of hymns and in reciting the Lord's Prayer. A brief prayer was said by Rev. F. H. Buck, B.A., M.C., war-time chaplain of the Forty-sixth Battalion.

As the crowd stood silent the shrill notes of the Last Post sounded across the inner harbor from bugles of the army and naval detachments, and echoed from the buildings across the water. They were followed by the hymn, "The Silent Tribute," and the gay life of Belleville.

As the ceremonial ended, His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor stepped forward and reverently laid a wreath at the foot of the monument. He was followed by representatives of the Municipality of Victoria, the British Columbia Legion, the Victoria State Vice-consul, the district officer commanding military district No. 11, the senior naval officer, Sir Percy Lake, and president of the Canadian Legion, Mayor Leeming, and representatives of the bereaved mothers of the city, the different branches of the veterans' organizations, and of the militia units.

The crowd remained still as the veterans marched off to Government Street in a steady column, followed by the militia and the army and navy bands.

Many Varieties Mingle
Without Ill-feeling in Hawaii Islands

J. Arthur Snowden, special representative from Hawaii, is visiting Victoria in the interests of interchange of tourist trade.

Mr. Snowden represents the Blue Book of Hawaii, the social register of the five major islands of the group, and several other publications available to tourists.

Travel between the Hawaiian Islands and Vancouver Island, which has developed considerably during recent years, should still increase, Mr. Snowden believes. The crisp atmosphere of Vancouver Island offers a welcome change for people from Hawaii.

The remarkable race tolerance, which makes Hawaii a pleasant place to live in despite the varied population, was commented upon by Mr. Snowden. Out of a population of 380,000, only 15,000 are Caucasians.

There are 22,000 Hawaiians, 18,000 Asiatic-Hawaiians, 28,051 Portuguese, 29,942 Chinese and 146,990 Japanese.

The intermingling of Chinese and Hawaiians has developed some of the finest citizens of the territory, who are to be found in the ranks of lawyers and other professions, men and women of business.

The pure Hawaiians are rapidly dwindling, their easy-going nature which prevents them from retaining encroachment having caused them to lose status as property owners or men in positions of authority.

The combination of Portuguese and Hawaiians has produced what is known in the territory as the "Music Boys," who strut around with ukuleles and have no great ambitions.

There is practically no racial feeling in the territory, said Mr. Snowden. Japanese, Chinese, Hawaiian and Caucasian children mingle in the schools and the question of race or color is seldom raised.

Duncan, Nov. 12.—Three basketball games were played in the Agricultural Hall on Friday night. Duncan Senior B defeated New Method Senior B, Victoria, by 51 to 23. Halftime score 19 to 14 in favor of Duncan. Teams were: New Method, 23; Belcher, 3; Hill, Pauldin 14, Sinclair 2, Taylor 2, Jones 2, Crawford 2. Duncan 51; M. Fletcher, Collier 19, E. Smythe 3, D. Pitt 4, E. Evans 15, J. Motilshaw 8, R. Haines 1, C. Strouger, referee.

Duncan Intermediate A defeated Colwood Intermediate A 34 to 29. Colwood: B. Pierce 24, E. Flery 4, A. Peat 4, C. Wilkin, T. MacKenzie 4, H. Brotherton 7, H. Jackson 4. Duncan: 34; C. Evans 2, F. Tait 6, R. Jack 4, C. Strouger 19, A. Lawless 1, Parker, L. Bennington 3, L. Clough, Kenneth and Halper, referees.

Chemantus Juveniles defeated Duncan Juniors 21 to 9. M. Fletcher was the referee.

and, even though he did not wish to, he turned back to the wounded slave. "There are some who say, 'let us forget the war, let us enjoy life, let us eat and be merry, for to-morrow we die. But you cannot forget the war,' Mr. Church claimed. "For out of the night that covers us these wounded hands draw us back. We can no more forget the war than forget the men who died."

FIGHTING TO END WAR

It was craver to remember the war and dwell on the courage, the ability, the strength of those who had died because they believed that they were fighting to banish war forever from the earth. They would not have gone to the front if they had not believed that the preacher declared.

There were books which had been brought out depicting the horrors of war, but these would not make people abandon war. The books had a terrible sale, for they appealed to the morbid in man. Men who harped on the millions who had died, the filth, the blood, and the horror of war, were not furthering the cause of peace.

"Why, these are the very things which made men go to fight. I can see them now," the pastor said, "swinging along to Ypres, boys who were happy, and smiling, and yet knew all about the horrors of war."

Sentiment was only the first stage, Mr. Church stated. People had to dig deeper and find the evil symptoms which caused war. To-day people thought was, but talked peace. Politicians made speeches about peace, but spent millions for war.

Mr. Church was almost ashamed of his country because of the way they had treated the wounded ex-service men. It seemed "terrible that Canada, one of the richest countries in the world, could not look after its wounded."

HOPEFUL FOR PEACE

Mr. Church was hopeful for peace. He saw the beginning of a peace movement, and he believed that man's desire for universal brotherhood would combat the war fever.

"But even when the day of peace has dawned never let us forget those who died for us. Let us always keep faith for those who lie in Flanders fields," the minister said.

Before the service, the colors of many patriotic organizations were carried in procession to the church, where they were deposited for the duration of the service. Reverend C. G. MacKenzie rendered the prayer, while Reverend G. Reynolds read the words of the conclusion of the service, Dean Quaintan administered the blessing.

The Canadian Legion Band, under the direction of C. A. Raine, accompanied the hymns.

NO WONDER HE FELT AND LOOKED SO MUCH BETTER

Half in fun and half because he occasionally "felt punk," a college chap joined 39 other students to form a test class or clinic. It was desired to test on this class the recuperative power of a certain tonic preparation, the formula of which was known to have blood-building qualities.

Like the other 39, this young man's blood was tested and the "count" of red corpuscles and red coloring matter was found well below normal. No wonder he "felt punk" at times. He was given the tonic and returned in thirty days to have his blood tested again. There was no doubt about improved health. He looked it and felt it. His blood test showed that red corpuscles and red coloring matter had strikingly increased. No wonder he felt and looked so much better.

Would you like to feel better, too? Would you like to be keen again about study or work or play? Then take this "tested tonic" which proved such a benefit to the forty college students. It restores well-being by increasing the red corpuscles and red coloring matter of the blood—those carriers in the blood stream which must be kept up to normal numbers if the person is to possess health and vitality. This tested tonic is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Easy to take whether at home, at college or at business. Recommended for all who feel run-down, over-tired, nervous or "low," or are under-weight. Your druggist has this tested tonic—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, price 50c.

Friendly Help Welfare Associations
of Greater Victoria for the Coming Year.

Thousands of letters and pledge cards have been sent out from Campaign Headquarters during the last few weeks but up to date the number of returns has been disappointingly small. It has been left to 360 individual donors to set the mark of $17,000 now reached. There must be many thousands of people in this city and the adjacent municipalities who, without feeling it, could give a dollar or two to help those who through circumstances beyond their control are helpless and hopeless.

On this page appears a reproduction of the pledge card sent out from Headquarters. For the convenience of those who have not received a card or who have mislaid it, may we suggest that they cut out this reproduction, fill it in and mail it to Campaign Headquarters, Room 6, 640 Fort Street, together with their donation, no matter how small. Should it be more convenient to pay at a later date or in instalments, the card may be filled in accordingly.

BRITISH LABOR HAS ITS OWN ROMANCE

JENNIE LEE

By MILTON BRONNER

London. — The working folk of Great Britain have been celebrating another "royal romance" these fall days, a wedding that is more important politically in many respects than the impending marriage of Prince George and Princess Marina.

But there is no blue blood involved in this romance. Both bride and bridegroom are of the people, the son and daughter of miners. They have struggled to the top of the Labor movement, although they have recently gone separate roads politically. Both are well known in Canada and the United States—Jennie Lee, beautiful, youthful former member of Parliament, and Aneurin Bevan, he of the silver tongue, still an M.P.

Their is a romance of common cause and politics.

ELECTED TO 1929 PARLIAMENT

Bevan and Miss Lee, who will retain her maiden name for political purposes, were both elected members of the 1929 House of Commons. Both were Labor M.P.'s. Both were young then. He thirty-one and she twenty-four. Both were intensely class-conscious—proud of families of workers and both, too, came from miners' families. Both had achieved education at a sacrifice. Both sprang into early leadership. Both were eloquent of tongue and fiery of temper. Both had small respect for the old dodges in Parliament and took pains to show it. Both have an immense independence. Bevan has stuck to the Labor Party. Miss Lee has left it, to be a standard-bearer of the Independent Labor Party, which has broken with the other.

Miss Lee is Scotch. Father and ancestors all miners at Lochgelly. Was one of a large family of children. As so often the case with Scotch working class families, they all clubbed together to get higher education for the brightest child. Jennie was she. After being graduated in arts and the law at Edinburgh University, she started teaching school. Entered Labor politics and ran for M.P. from North Lanark. Her Tory opponent was Lord Scone, and she beat him badly.

ASTONISHED PARLIAMENT

Parliament was astonished by her girlish beauty—flashing black eyes, gleaming white teeth, shapely flapper figure, pretty silk-hose-encased legs. Then, without any perceptible nervousness, she made her maiden speech—a flashing attack on the government's budget bill as a "mixture of cant, corruption and incompetence."

Beaten in the last election, she has made two lecture tours in the United States. She is standing examinations for admission to the bar next December, after which she plans another lecture tour in the United States.

WAS BLACKLISTED

Bevan is a Welshman. His family were all miners. He was educated in the local primary schools and won scholarship to Ruskin College at Oxford University. He had started working in a coal mine when he was thirteen. His health forced him out. He had taken part in strikes, and when he got out of college, the big companies had him on the blacklist.

At nineteen he was made chairman of one of the biggest miners' lodges in Britain. It numbered 4,000 members. He rose steadily in the trades union and Labor Party organizations. He was adopted as parliamentary candidate for the Ebbw Vale district of Wales and had 7,000 majority over both his Liberal and Tory opponents together in 1929. He has been returned ever since. As silver-tongued as his fellow Welshman, the great Lloyd George, he astonished Parliament by doing what even veterans hesitate to do. He bitterly attacked L. G.—and got away with it. Now whenever word goes out that he is speaking, the House of Commons fills.

HUMANITY VS. DOGS

Last May the Labor Party was attacking the government's reduction of the duties, particularly as they applied to the children of the unemployed. Up jumped Bevan, reading from a circular of a dogs' home in which the King's name appeared as a patron. He cited the charges.

"If there were any decency in this country people would not say you can keep a child on two shillings a week and yet say a dog cannot be kept on less than nine shillings. It is monstrous and inequitable," he said.

Hats Princess Marina Selected

One of Madame Suzy's models exhibits two of the hats chosen by Princess Marina for her wardrobe. Below are three others from the collection.

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
PARIS.

ANYONE who may have any doubts about the level-headedness of Princess Marina, who will marry Prince George of Britain soon, need only have accompanied that very good-looking young woman on her four-day shopping tour here.

Madame Suzy of the Rue de la Paix has the privilege of making all the hats the princess took with her to the hats the princess took with her to England. While Princess Marina seemed to prefer the new and port little turban shapes which this modiste launched for the fall and which was her first choice when she arrived in Paris, she nevertheless included two brimmed hats in her collection. She wears both styles equally well.

REVEALS SURE DRESS SENSE

Princess Marina revealed a very sure dress sense, as well as a marked artistic gift in the matter of color

MISSIONARY'S WIDOW PASSES

Rebecca Delaney Stillwell passed away Saturday afternoon after a short illness at the Royal Jubilee Hospital. She was seventy-nine years old.

Mrs. Stillwell was born in Pembroke, Ontario, and was the widow of the late Rev. Dr. J. R. Stillwell, who preceded her ten years ago.

She spent the early part of her life in Ontario, and after her marriage accompanied her husband to India, where he served as a Baptist missionary for over forty-five years. Returning from Cocanada, India, Mrs. Stillwell spent a short time in Ottawa and four years ago took up her residence in this city with her daughter, Mrs. W. E. Enoch, 2708 Dufferin Street, Oak Bay.

She leaves two daughters: Mrs. E. Enoch and Mrs. J. B. McLaughlin, Brandon, Manitoba, and two sons: George Delaney of Morris Town, New York State, and James Delaney, Ottawa.

The remains are resting at the S. J. Curry and Son Funeral Home. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Ball totaling $250 was estreated in the City Police court this morning when four women, charged with being keeper and inmates of a disorderly house at 548 Johnson Street, failed to appear. Jackie Simms was charged with being the keeper and Helen Jones, Rita Lane and Eddie Mack were charged with being inmates.

A medalion said to be a relic of Captain James Cook's visit to Vancouver Island will be placed on exhibition shortly in the B.C. archives, according to Dr. Kaye Lamb, the archivist. The medalion was found by a Gyoquo Indian, Arthur Riedinger, who took it to Rev. Father Anthony Thorhaar, and through his efforts it is to be displayed in the archives.

That the Great War occasionally drew out the best from a man is strikingly seen in the story of Philip Morton as told by Mary Shipman Andrews in "The Three Things." From a shallow snob he passes through suffering into a man of deep human sympathy with a desire to serve. How this transformation took place will be portrayed by Miss End Cole, dramatic reader, who will interpret this story at Centennial United Church, to-morrow night, at 8:15 o'clock. Miss Cole will be assisted by Miss Kathryn Moore, pianist; Jack Tregalva, reader, and Mario Luca, tenor soloist and an Alway-Kent winner. A collection will be taken.

Two local stores were entered over the week end, according to reports made to the city police. Mr. H. Duckworth, 1678 Dallas Road, reported his grocery store had been entered and produce valued at $30 stolen. Entrance was gained by use of a pass key through the rear door. Clark's Pharmacy, 1064 Pandora Avenue, was robbed and shaving cream, cigarettes, playing cards, a screwdriver, a Rolls Royce and $2.10 in cash taken by a thief who gained entrance by forcing the transom.

Genius Of Violin Delights To Speed

Kayla Mitzel, Appearing Here in Recital To-night, Fumes Over Speed Regulations: Drove Car From Santa Barbara to Los Angeles, Eighty-four Miles, in One Hour and Half

"I am thrilled at the prospect of opening my Canadian tour in Victoria," exclaimed Kayla Mitzel, nineteen-year-old violinist, when she was approached at the Empress Hotel this morning for an interview.

"I am proud of being a Canadian, and I feel sure, if only for the reason that I am a Canadian, that I shall receive a cordial and sympathetic reception."

Miss Mitzel is a genius, and what is more, she is unspoiled. A stranger to temperament, she makes instant friendships by her naturalness and charm.

To-night, this new star of the violin firmament will make her initial appearance in the city, and will play her Ruggiero before an appreciative audience in the Empress Hotel ballroom.

HOME TO HER

"I am so happy to be here. It is home to me," said the Winnipeg-born girl. Her beautiful brown eyes lighted up with animation as she told of her plans now that she is once more in the ballroom for rehearsal, to know all about Victoria, and said she had already fallen in love with the city with its kind people and wealth of beautiful flowers.

The youthful violinist had been resting during the forenoon, and when interrupted by the reporter was lightly stepping across the rotunda to the ballroom for rehearsal, hugging her violin case containing the priceless Ruggiero, dating back to the year 1890, which she bought five years ago when in Italy.

As she sought out her accompanist, Jaye Roubloff, she was not disposed to talk about her art.

MADE FAST RUN

Oddly enough, the conversation turned to speed and automobiles. Miss Mitzel drives her own car, and she confessed that she loves to speed. "I just love to drive at high speed," she said. "I was not bringing my car with me on tour, because this appears to be such a lovely place to explore," she said.

"I did a lot of driving when I was in Southern California. It was great. I drove from Santa Barbara to Los Angeles, a distance of eighty-four miles, in an hour and a half."

She was then asked whether, interrupted at the wheel, gave her nervous prostration. She held the constant fear that her daughter might meet with an accident and interfere with her career. Kayla thrilled with laughter, as with an imperious wave of her expansive fingers, she brushed her mother's fears away.

LIKES RAIN

"The violinist sprang another surprise when she explained that she liked rain. "It is so invigorating and I always feel cheerful when it rains, and the harder it rains the more cheerful I am," she said. "You know, we get so little rain in the prairies, that this is why I like the rain so much."

Kayla said she was named after her grandmother, who was a Hungarian. Of Hungarian-Russian blood, Miss Mitzel was born in Winnipeg. She is anticipating her forthcoming visit to her home city and says she understands they are planning a civic reception for her.

Life was extraordinarily hard in those highlands, Sir Percy said. Most children born in the winter died, he added.

PRIMITIVE MARRIAGE

He outlined the primitive marriage ceremonies of the mountain tribes. The minimum price for a bride was 100 sheep, he noted. Although prearranged, the ceremony followed the tropics, now captured by Sir Percy. Sir Percy stated before giving a vivid description of the event.

Proceeding upward to the "Roof of the World," the party had used yakhs, probably the most sure-footed animal in the world.

At the top of a 15,000-foot peak, the party had struck a snow flurry which had been swept away for a few minutes by a gust of wind, revealing a wonderful panorama of peaks.

Sir Percy showed views of one of the glaciers before sketching his journey down. The party had been joined by Cossacks who journeyed through a country veritably devoid of buildings and populated by nomadic people.

HUNTING EXPLOITS

The speaker turned his attention towards his hunting exploits, in which he brought down four trophies, two specimens of the "Roof of the World."

Leaving the high altitudes, the party journeyed down to a mere 5,000 feet, where they saw a native sport, a horseback with the skin of a goat, a cross between rugby and polo.

Through the courtesy of the Aga Khan, he had gained a particularly favored position among the people of his remote domains near Chinese Turkistan. The people were Aryians, some of whom claimed descent from Alexander the Great, the speaker noted.

He would never visit that country again, but often in his dreams he would see the figure of a polo player across the Roof of the World, and wondering at the marvelous country which he saw before him, the speaker turned to Sir Percy.

He was introduced by General Sir Charles Delme-Radcliffe and thanked for his address by Sir Percy Lake.

Mrs. S. O. May was laid to rest in the Royal Oak Burial Park. Numerous floral tributes attested to the high regard in which Mr. May was held. Mrs. S. O. May sang the solo, "Lead, Kindly Light," and the hymn was "Abide With Me." Honorary pallbearers were William May and R. H. Huxter, and the funeral was held at the Royal Oak Burial Park. It is requested that no flowers be sent.

Sir Percy Sykes Tells Gyros of Country, Peoples and Customs

Interesting and entertaining stories of Chinese Turkistan and the "Roof of the World," as well as descriptions of the country, the people and their customs, were presented to members of the Gyro Club by Brigadier-General Sir Percy Sykes, K.C.I.E., C.B., C.M.G., at the club's luncheon in the Empress Hotel to-day.

The speaker referred to his travels through the Gulf of Finland down through Russia, over the Celestial Mountains into Chinese Turkistan in fulfillment of his desire to climb "the roof of the world."

Speaking of the Chinese soldiery which had met him on his arrival at his post, Sir Percy quoted the Chinese proverb "You don't make nicks of good iron and you don't make soldiers of good men." He believed adherence to that axiom had resulted in China occupying the place it did as a nation at the present time.

In some detail the speaker dealt with the humorous feast of his visit to the officials of his new post, COLORFUL SLIDES

Colorful pictures of the belles of the locality as well as members of the household were shown by Sir Percy. He told of the manner in which his well-meaning cook had almost poisoned him and his guests by attempting to serve cake flavored with a preserving powder.

COURAGEOUS TRADERS

In some detail he referred to the courage of the traders who invaded that "roof of the world," braving the perils of avalanches on the treacherous trails and passes.

The country, apart from the mountains, was almost entirely desolate, dotted with oases. He had visited the chief school of the district where he was located, and had found knowledge was acquired in parrot fashion.

It was interesting, he said, to note how the Chinese had influenced the Muslims in that territory, with the use of human labor in the place of animals or machines.

Primitive cultivation spades, virtually the only implements used, were shown on the screen, as were various irrigation projects.

"ROOF OF WORLD"

Leaving Chinese Turkistan he turned his attention to the "Roof of the World." The mountains there, as well as the valleys, were among the most inaccessible places in the world, Sir Percy noted.

The party had to wait the beginning of the floods early in June to get into the country, he said.

One of the rivers he had to cross was so cold and swift it was almost impossible to ford on foot. Horses were used in some places, and camels had to be used in others for the deeper streams.

Up precipitous trails, where they depended solely on their sure-footed ponies, the party had to climb. The party had proceeded to regions unobtainable cold. Tents could not be used, he stated, saying felt had been put up to house them.

Life was extraordinarily hard in those highlands, Sir Percy said. Most children born in the winter died, he added.

MINIMUM WAGES FOR DOMESTIC HELP

Minimum wages for domestic help are not warranted in a general way until a course of training is instituted in which girls could obtain diplomas in the work, the same as other occupations. This was the consensus of opinion when the Victoria Scroptimists Club discussed the matter at the regular meeting last Friday.

A system of training such as this would not only protect employers, which had been attempted in the past, but would also give the girls a standard of the occupation, it was felt.

The club discussed plans for Christmas welfare work, which will be held on December 8, it was announced.

Armistice Concert Attracted Crowd

A large and appreciative audience filled the rotunda of the Empress Hotel yesterday evening to hear a special "Armistice Concert," a program presented by the hotel concert orchestra under the baton of William F. Tickle.

The program was as follows: Adagio Fathelique, Godard; "Boes of Placidy," Wood; Potpourri, "Cavalcade," Coward, introducing the tunes made famous by the troops in France; "Dear Little Boy of Mine," Ball; "Bing Boys are Here," D'Ayer; "Songs of England," Myddleton; "Hands Across the Sea," Roberts.

Carter, 475 Superior Street; six sisters, Mrs. John MacDonald, Nanaimo; Mrs. James Chalmers, Vancouver; Grace, Marguerite, Marion and Dorothy, also a brother, Clifford, at the family residence.

SALVATIONISTS YULETIDE PLANS

Arrange to Help Needy Families at Christmas

Arrangements for the Christmas activities of the Salvation Army are now being made, according to a statement made by Adjutant Sharp, the district organizer, recently.

As in past years, the approach of the festive season brings a special claim upon the workers of the Army, and plans are now being made to again meet the situation. It is contrary to Army principles and methods to administer help indiscriminately, and arrangements are made for every case to be thoroughly investigated. The Army co-operating with all other agencies to avoid duplication. The Army is in an especially favored position to know those whose needs are great, the regular visits paid to the homes giving first-hand knowledge of these cases, many of whom would never ask for aid. Last year over 300 Christmas hampers were supplied, each one being of the standard size for the family concerned. The contact thus made enables the Army workers to follow up many cases, and engenders confidence that open up the way for permanent moral and spiritual uplift.

Stretching across Canada from Halifax in the east to Victoria in the west, there is a chain of institutions owned and operated by the Salvation Army, which are proving themselves havens of hope and mercy. The officers and welfare workers are experienced in dealing with the needs of the people. A Salvation Army service department is an indispensable unit in all the principal cities of the Dominion. Locating the Army through its stores and hotel, is a good Samaritan to many in these times of difficulty. The hotel is a shelter to many a homeless man during the cold days of winter. The record of this institution is one to which the Army may point with satisfaction so far as relief work is concerned. It cannot say that a profitable business is being done. Indeed, the outgo on account of the hotel is considerably more than the income.

The Army officers engaged in that line of work have undoubtedly been responsible for the lifting back on the road to self-respect of hundreds, yes thousands, of men in its history, and everyone so rescued is a testimony to the service the Army has been to the world. Food to the hungry, shelter to the homeless, and a word of encouragement dropped at the right time will do wonders to the regeneration of the man who is down and may think he is out.

LAST RITES HELD

The funeral of Mrs. Edith Penberthy Menzies took place Saturday afternoon in the presence of many sorrowing friends, Rev. P. W. McKinnon officiating. The hymns sung were "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and "Rock of Ages." During the service a solo, "Sometimes We'll Understand," was sung by Mrs. J. Murray. The casket and hearse were covered with beautiful floral offerings.

Boston, Toronto And St. Louis Win Battles In I.H.L.

THE SPORTS MIRROR

THE UNITED STATES Lawn Tennis Association has gotten around to doing what Bill Tilden advised it to do three years ago, provide some young blood for the Davis Cup team. President Walter Merrill Hall has announced that in addition to the members of the 1934 squad (minus George M. Lott, who has since turned professional) and Wilmer Allison, who went into the final round of the U.S. championship after being passed up by the cup committee, the rookies Gene Mako, Donald Budge and Frankie Parker are to be given through tryouts next spring.

The latter three were suggested by Tilden two years ago. The association heeded the old master's advice when Les Stofen was added to the squad this year, and it so turned out that Stofen and George M. Lott turned in America's only victory in the doubles. When seven expeditions fail, it is about time to try someone and something new. Taking two sets before winning his side, Sidney B. Wood demonstrated that he had it in him to repel Frederick Perry. With a better break in the back, the once precocious darling of the Seabright Courts may click in 1935, but the other singles players must be developed.

In the national tournament, Allison demonstrated that he was a fine singles player until he met Perry. So it would seem that a running mate for the old Wood must be developed from among Mako, Budge and Parker. Right now Mako appears to have the inside track. Like the freckled and red-headed Budge, he hails from California, where tennis players grow. Mako beat Perry, whose grasp is the one that keeps the Davis Cup in the land, 6-0, 6-2, in an exhibition match in Los Angeles recently. But that may have been due to the world amateur champion being more interested in Hollywood than in tennis at the time. Indeed, there is talk of Perry accepting motion picture offers, and denouncing his ranking as an amateur, after the entire complexion of the Davis Cup situation.

But Mako's record is good enough without his conquest of Perry. He acquired the U.S. Intercollegiate title during the last summer, and after being the runner-up for two consecutive years, topped the U.S. junior crown without the loss of a set. As a matter of fact, only one set was secured.

Budge bears a striking resemblance to Maurice E. McLoughlin, the California Comet of two decades ago. He beat Mako in the U.S. junior final of 1933. He is the son of a champion, and the top ranking player of northern California. Parker is a Polish youngster from Milwaukee whose real name is not that, but one that will be in the newspaper writers' scratching their heads. Parker, a student at Lawrenceville Academy in New Jersey, has been phenomenal at tennis during the last two years, but spotty.

The Davis Cup committee again neglects Bryan Grant, although little Al's name probably would have been more troublesome to Bunny Austin than was that of Francis X. Shields, who found it impossible to beat the British stylist of the court. It is explained that Grant is more efficient on clay courts. Yet he has defeated every member of this year's Davis Cup team, and fared very well on eastern grass, on which he has repelled, among other notables, Ellsworth Vines, Wood and Gregory Mangin. Just what does Budge have to do to get a break?

After a reasonably close boxing match there will always be widespread disagreement as to the winner, comments a New York boxing writer, but it does seem as though the number of disputed decisions could be reduced if there were some agreement as to the proper method of scoring a fight. The official scoring rules in New York state forth that the fighter winning the most rounds must be given the decision. This superficially sound idea totally fails to take account of the most important aspect of a boxing bout—effective punching. A fighter may do more damage in two or three rounds of a ten-round bout than his opponent is able to inflict in the other seven, and yet, under the rounds-win system, he can lose the decision even if he has scored a number of knock-downs and has his man practically out at the finish.

Critics have pointed out the Carnera-Barbott as an example. If Primo had been held him off for the remaining rounds of the match, he might have received the decision in spite of the fact that he had been floored many times and had taken a bad licking whenever Bar opened up. In many rounds Bar did little or no fighting, and judges had to score those rounds for Primo, though the big Italian did little or no damage, merely flicking Mako's face with his long left hand. Then again, the question of strong finishers is not taken into account by the rounds-win system. Effective punching and action at the end of the fight should be the most important factors in judging a bout, and if these things had been stressed by the officials, many recent decisions would have gone the other way, and much dissatisfaction might have been avoided.

Little Ken Doraty Again Plays Hero Act as Toronto Whips Canadiens

Eagles Rally To Defeat Rangers

Three National Hockey League teams were willing to admit to-day that one league game is potent conditioning hard to offset in early-season going. A trio of clubs that broke into the present hockey scene over the weekend lost their first game to teams that packed a 1934-35 schedule game in their experiences. Detroit Red Wings, New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens all went down to defeat as they made their first league appearances of the season. Boston Bruins, who had broken in Thursday with a loss to Toronto, took Red Wings 4 to 2 at Detroit yesterday evening. St. Louis, victims of Chicago Thursday, beat Rangers 4 to 2 Saturday, and Toronto Leafs came from behind Saturday to edge out Canadiens 2 to 1.

Little Ken Doraty, the Leaf winger, stole the glory for the second time. He scored the tying goal against the Canadiens, the team to which he was loaned until he showed his value to the Leafs by making the playoffs for the winning goal against Boston Thursday.

GREAT FINISH
The pinch-hitting puckchaser chose a spot ten seconds from the end of regular time to stage his act. Paul Raymond's second period goal had given the Canadiens a 1 to 0 lead that looked good enough to win and most of the fans were leaving the rink when Doraty accepted Hec Kilgus' pass and tipped it into the net behind Wilf Cude. Harvey Jackson scored the winning goal on a solo effort midway through the ten minute overtime period.

Leafs found it impossible to beat Cude before Doraty did it although they drove pucks at him forty-five times during the evening. A third period offensive that brought them three goals gave St. Louis Eagles, the transplanted Ottawa Senators, their win from Lester Patrick's New Yorks. Des Roches led the only goal of the first period for them and Butch Keeling had evened it up in the second.

Within forty-eight seconds in the third period Perry Shannon beat Andy Aitkenhead alone and Syd Howe drove two pucks past the New Yorker to give the Eagles victory in their second game. St. Louis Bill Cook scored Rangers' second goal on Alex Levinsky's pass.

The game Boston Bruins had at Toronto showed up in the battle against Red Wings as they outskated and outplayed the Detroiters. Red Wings matched Charlie Sander's first period goal with a goal by Eddie Shore, but they had nothing to offset the pair of tallies Sands and Stewart drove past Normie Smith in the middle session.

Marty Barry and Dit Clapper, two of Boston's first string line, drew ten minute misconduct penalties in the first period for protesting too vigorously against Barry being penalized for interference.

SUMMARY
First period—No score; penalties: Blair and Lamb.
Second period—1, Canadiens, Raymond (Carson), 8:20. Penalties: Horner (2) and O. Mantha.
Third period—2, Toronto, Doraty (Thoms-Kilgus), 19:50. Penalties: Jenkins; Lepine; Jollist and Mondou.

T. Morrison Wins Uplands Tourney

Turning in a net score of 64, T. Morrison won the annual Remembrance day tournament at the Uplands Golf Club yesterday. His victory gave him possession of the Angus-Hillborough shield for the next twelve months. In second place was Dr. H. H. Lively with a net 65. Morrison also won a special prize presented by Major Angus Lively. Following the tournament the sixty-eight competitors enjoyed a buffet supper in the clubhouse.

SHAWNIGAN WINS RUGBY

Lake Team Defeats University School 17 to 10 at Up-island Ground

Shawnigan Lake School beat University School, 17 to 10, in a very evenly contested rugby game played under perfect conditions at Shawnigan, Saturday. The up-island school forwards beat the University scrum for possession of the ball on the majority of occasions, so that the outsiders had plenty of opportunities and there were many good passing movements. The tackling of the University outsiders was excellent and made scoring difficult.

Quite early in the game Dawson went very close with a drop at goal and shortly after Mackie rounded off a good three-quarter movement by scoring the first try. He also scored the second try after fifteen minutes play after a similar attack.

University School then began to attack and it was not until after a drop out following an unsuccessful attempt at a drop goal that Shawnigan was again on the offensive. This ended when Dawson scored in a favorable position. In spite of this attempt at converting failed, as had his other two.

University began the second half with great effect. Berry scored after a great run and Gee adding the extra points. Almost immediately afterwards they were again attacking strongly as the result of an intercepted pass. Relief eventually came when Dawson found touch near the corner flag from a free kick.

A certain score was thrown away by a fumble, but Harris scored almost at once, Dawson being successful with the kick. The next try was also scored by the same player after a good round of passing. Shawnigan continued to press, but could not score again, in spite of a series of five-yard scrums.

The University forwards then carried play to the other end and set up a strong attack, which ended with Berry again scoring after a strong N. Wall up. Time came shortly afterwards.

Remains Well Up in Cleveland Bike Race; U.S. Three-some in Front

Cleveland, Nov. 12.—The fourth of the six-day bicycle race here found the American team of Winter-Walsh-Ottavie tied for first place in the first of the remaining English trios of Fielding-Crosley-Van Stambruck, but the Americans were far ahead in points.

SCORES
The second quarter was scoreless with neither side able to penetrate into scoring territory. In the third, big "Oke" Olsen, Regina's triple threat man, opened up his bag of tricks and between tossing forwards, engineering end runs, putting sixty yards at a time and hitting the line for yards himself, set the prairie squad in front of the Moraimos' goal posts for two field goals by Paul Kirk.

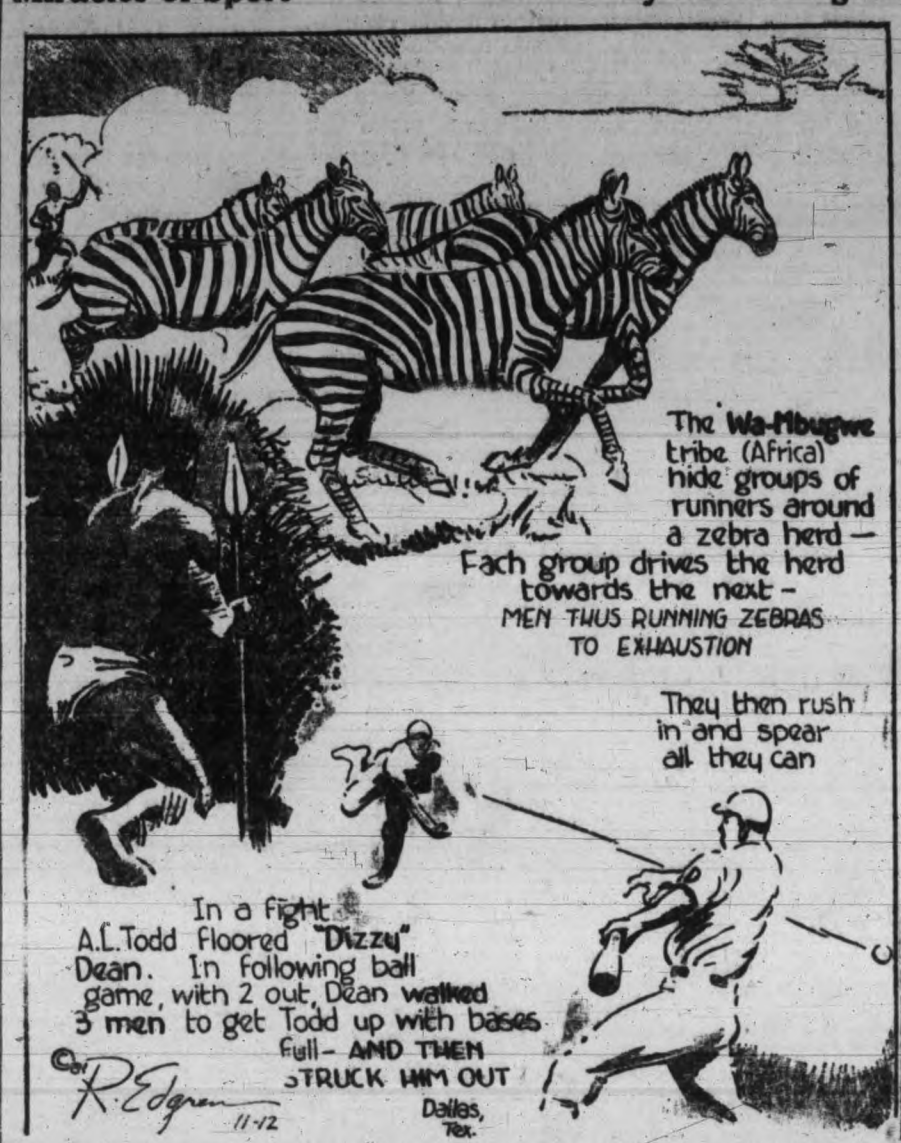

Two breaks gave Rough Riders their last two touchdowns. The first came early in the fourth quarter when Kirk drove through off tackle to intercept a lateral pass in the Moraimos' backfield and raced twenty yards for a touchdown.

COSTLY FUMBLE
Eric Cameron, Moraimos' captain, fumbled a kick late in the quarter to pave the way for Regina's final score. He had barely received the ball when he was hit by three Rough Riders. The ball bounced into the arms of Al Miller, who was back of the touchline.

Moraimos put up a gallant bid in the closing minutes in an effort to break through and score, but were held to a lone point on Bob Miller's deadline kick.

Regina Riders Win By Decisive Margin

Turn Back Vancouver Meralomas 22 to 2 in First Game of Western Canada Football Final; Kirk Stars With Two Field Goals and Try; Second Game To-night

Vancouver, Nov. 12.—A scant sixty minutes of play to-day separates Regina Roughriders from the western Canada football championship, a title they are confidently expected to have tucked away when they walk off the field.

Heavy pre-game favorites, Riders' stock was still higher to-day after their 22 to 2 victory over Vancouver Meralomas in the first of the two-game series Saturday.

Held to a 5 to 1 lead in the first two quarters by a fighting coast crew, the prairie machines went into action in the second half and rolled up seventeen more points on two touchdowns, two field goals and a kicking.

Ralph Pierce, field Regina half-back, stunned the orange and squad and some 2,700 football fans when he flashed around right end and through a half dozen Moraimos tacklers to score a first minute touchdown in the opening quarter. He made his run from a roughed to give Meralomas their point just before the quarter ended.

SCORELESS QUARTER
The second quarter was scoreless with neither side able to penetrate into scoring territory. In the third, big "Oke" Olsen, Regina's triple threat man, opened up his bag of tricks and between tossing forwards, engineering end runs, putting sixty yards at a time and hitting the line for yards himself, set the prairie squad in front of the Moraimos' goal posts for two field goals by Paul Kirk.

REG. SHANKS TAKES TRIAL

Wins Brentwood Trophy in Annual Victoria Motorcycle Club Competition

Covering the difficult fifty mile course with the loss of only twenty-six points for a total of 974, Reg. Shanks won the annual reliability trial of the Victoria Motorcycle Club yesterday, for possession of the Brentwood Trophy. Shanks lost twenty-four points on a time error and two points at secret checks for riding ability.

In second place was Bill Espley, with 969 points. He dropped twenty-four points at time checks and seven at secret checks. Third position went to Brian Carmichael with 953 points. The course was through the Highland district by way of Esquimalt, Ladang, Glen Lake, Millstream Road, Munns Road, Prospect Lake, down old interurban track to Brentwood, back to the old West Road and round filter beds at Beaver Lake, down Halliburton Hill, around trails at Mount Douglas Park and through the deep mud in Brentwood estate to the finish. Nine out of the twelve starters finished.

COMMENTS OF FANS
Judging from the comments of the crowd the battle was too one-sided to be thrilling. During the first they had little to say about the Highland district by way of Esquimalt, Ladang, Glen Lake, Millstream Road, Munns Road, Prospect Lake, down old interurban track to Brentwood, back to the old West Road and round filter beds at Beaver Lake, down Halliburton Hill, around trails at Mount Douglas Park and through the deep mud in Brentwood estate to the finish. Nine out of the twelve starters finished.

"What's Davies waiting for?" "Have you got anything left, Tommy?" "I want my money back," a fan called in the fourth.

"Finish it, Albie. It's Armistice night," someone shouted in the fifth.

"Hurry up, the bath water's cooling," called a wag in the next.

In the seventh they called for Davies to end it. "Poor old Tommy," "Tell Jumbo to come and finish." "When are you coming out of it?" were calls in the ninth and a kid piped up, "I challenge the winner." But strangely enough Fielding showed up far better than could be anticipated in the following rounds, although all went easily to Davies.

Bill Guxton, local featherweight, got a big hand for a clever fight to win over Phil Trudeau, Vancouver. Nick Laker, Victoria lightweight, beat Ray Adamson, Vancouver.

Hard hitting Frankie Neil, heart-breaking obstacle to a lot of ambitious fighters, was too much for up a good, show substituting for Arnold Robertson, Vancouver.

Roy Baker refereed the preliminaries. Jack Allen was third man in the ring for the main bout. The gate was between $500 and $600.

The snappiest bit of entertainment on the programme was in the form of an exhibition bout in which Jumbo Davies and Dave McGoldrick appeared for three rounds. Although not out for a decision the lads tore right into it, and there was a lot of hard hitting in a speedy show.

Fifth Brigade Again Defeats Scottish For Fordham-Johnson Trophy; Highlanders Surprise Followers With Unexpected Strength; Score Is 8 to 3

A disjointed Fifth Brigade rugby team, playing below its usual calibre, owing to the absence of Paul Rowe from the back division, showed a just enough superior conditioning to whip the Canadian Scottish, revamped to include many of the old guard, 8 to 3 at Macdonald Park Saturday, in the fourth annual army game. The crowd which thronged the sidelines was struck not so much by the outcome as the ability of some of the veteran highland backfield men to stand up under the pounding of the game.

As a result of the engagement, the Gunners now hold a two-to-one edge in games on the Scots in the classic, and they have hurled the side Navy back into first place in the league standing.

As a further result of the fixture, Art Chapman, star sharpshooter of the Blue Ribbons basketball team, looks forward a month or two of inactivity in his chosen sport. Playing on the Scots' three-line, he had his finger put out of joint and the ligament trapped between the bones in a tackle. Bill Campbell, rapidly improving Highlanders' forward, will hobble around on crutches for a while with a foot injury, and Ken Fleming, talkative five-eighths of the Gunners, may be out of play for a short time with a leg injury. All three were casualties in the fixture.

TIGHT GAME
With both backfields closing fast on the opposition whenever a three-quarter run threatened, the game was tight. Each gained well on kicks, Colgate getting his punts away particularly well to relieve when the artillerymen pressed. Jack Horne also turned in a stellar defensive game on left wing for the Scots. He held his side intact until the killers three-line had divided to the two outsiders, when Chapman left the field and Campbell Forbes moved up to help the forwards in a last desperate drive.

It was the usual colorful fixture, with the pipe band of the Scottish in attendance and the crowds streaming onto forbidden ground against the edict of the park policemen.

Mayor David Leeming kicked off, and several civic and other dignitaries were present.

NEARLY SCORED
The game was but a few minutes old when Peden fumbled a kick and Bill Campbell following up hard, snatched up the ball and pushed it fifteen feet for the line. He was almost over for a try but juggled the ball around his neck and failed to get it down.

Chapman returned the kick the Gunners gained when they touched down. McInnes, with one crushed hand virtually useless, missed the catch and the Scots gained a five yard scrum. The Gunners bucked back to their own twenty-five and then cleared with Stipe kicking to touch.

McInnes started a backfield run when Colgate punted deep into his ground, only to have Chapman put the ball back in the artillery territory on a kick.

Still pressing, Forbes secured the ball well out and tried for a field goal but missed.

The Britishers came to life and Fleming led a rush down field. Forbes intercepted and broke up a run Jack Horne touched down for a safety kick as the Fifth Brigade punted too far ahead on another drive.

USING HIGH PUNTS
Colgate cleared with a free kick and sent the ball to the Scots' twenty-five as the Gunners continued to press. The Brigade boys were going down under high punts to maintain pressure in the highlander's ground until the Scots stomped back, following a safety kick to the Fifth's twenty-five where McInnes cleared with a penalty kick and Colgate returned the punt.

On a scant three-quarter run, Henderson got away on the wing for the Scottish and passed to Horne who was grounded before he was dangerous. Shanks kept the 'highlanders in the Gunners' ground where they secured several five yard scrums without being able to get over.

Art Chapman was held out when he plunged for the line and the killers continued pressure.

The Brigade finally cleared when one of the Scots played offside and went to midfield on a highlander's knock-on.

GUNNERS PRESS
Fleming made good ground but was grounded heavily in the Scottish territory before Doug Peden put a long punt back to midfield when the killers returned.

The Gunners opened a sustained attack, holding play in the highlander's twenty-five. McInnes got a placement kick near the line on the Scots' thirty-five, but his attempt was short and Colgate cleared.

Fleming was hurt when he attempted to cut in on the Scots' twenty-five and was taken from the field. The highlanders were smashed into the Brigade's backs when ever they tried combination movements. Haines tried a field goal on the highlanders' twenty-five but his kick failed to rise.

Peden recovered the ground but on the twenty-five yard kick with a nice punt and the Brigade returned. Shanks was held out as he lunged for the line on the tail end of a three quarter run started by Scott.

The Scottish backs were tiring quickly and just managed to hold the freer Gunners from going over. Banks finally cleared but the Brigade finished the half on the attack. It was a Glasgow Warple back.

FIRST SCORE
Popped up by their rest, the Scots

VETERAN DIES AT CEREMONY

Cap. Wm. Stuart, 80-year-old Veteran of Great War, Collapses in Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—Captain William Stuart, eighty-year-old veteran of the Great War, died here today. Standing on Parliament Hill ready to place a wreath on the Cenotaph in remembrance of his fallen comrades in the World War, he collapsed yesterday into the arms of a fellow wreath-bearer. A short interval later as the guns boomed out the beginning of the two minutes of silence, he succumbed to a heart attack.

It was the first Remembrance Day parade the doughty Ottawa Scotman had ever attended. And it was the first occasion, since he went back to "civilian" life after five years' war service, on which he had worn publicly the four medals he had won overseas. Friends carried him in their arms into the Parliament Buildings when he fell. Minister of Railways and Canals, R. J. Manion, military cross winner and physician, rushed from the ceremony to render medical aid, but Captain Stuart was past human assistance.

Mr. And Mrs.

Dorothy Dix

IF I COULD give one piece of advice more earnest than any other to a young couple who are about to be married, it would be this: Make up your minds that you are going to be good sports about marriage, and that you are going to take whatever knocks that you are going to get on the chin and come up smiling for another round. Make up your minds that you are not going to welch on your bargain, that you are going to stand by it and make the best of it.

Your marriage is a matter absolutely of your own volition. Your husband or wife is your own pick of all the millions of men and women in the world. You know beforehand the conditions in which you must live. Nobody has shanghaied or inveigled you into marriage. You have not been hypnotized into marrying any strange woman or man. Domesticity with its curtailment of personal liberty, with its sacrifices, with its expenses, with its obligations is no stranger, unknown desert into which you have accidentally stumbled.

Unless you have so little intelligence that you are not able to determine the nature and quality of your life, as the legal definition of matrimony goes, you are perfectly aware of what you are doing when you get married, of the disposition and character of the mate you have selected and of the difficulties you are likely to encounter.

Then why do the cry-baby act about it and howl to Heaven your complaint when the inevitable happens and your marriage turns out to be just as full of disappointments and disillusion as everybody else's? Why rush to the divorce court because of the faults in your mate that you knew he or she possessed all along? Why turn yellow and be a quitter when the life you deliberately chose for yourself proves to have more thorns than roses in it.

Practically every one knows what he is doing when he marries. But few there be who are willing to pay the price of their mistakes. In all of my experience I have known but one. I knew a woman who, against the advice of her family and friends, perhaps against her own better judgment, married a drunkard. For thirty years she fished him out of gutters and nursed him through drunken apoplexies and waited up at night to open the door for him when he came staggering home. A thousand times he must have shamed and humiliated her. A thousand times he must have broken her heart. But she never nagged him about his habits. She never asked for sympathy for herself. She never even criticized him.

"I knew John drank before I married him," she would say. "I knew what a drunkard's wife must endure. I loved him well enough to take the chance on it and I have accepted the result without regret and without complaint."

Few women have the courage of this woman. Many also marry men that they know drink, but they expect some miracle to occur that will turn the sot into a prohibitionist, and when it does not happen they beat upon their breasts and rend the air with their wails of misery.

A large percentage of women who make marriage a failure for themselves and a hell on earth for their husbands are those who marry poor men and are discontented because they cannot have the things that rich women have. A girl will know perfectly well that John is making a small salary and that if she marries him she will have to live in a shabby house and wear cheap frocks and do her own housework.

But when the glamour of the honeymoon has faded and she has to count her pennies and drop out of her old set because she cannot afford to run with it, she doesn't meet poverty with a laugh and a kiss and think it fun to help John build his fortune. She begins nagging him and reproaching him because he can't make as much money as some other man does, and she considers herself a martyr because she has to endure the fate she has brought down on her own head.

Nor are men any more given to accepting marriage "as is" philosophically than women are. Witness the men who pick out dumb-bells for wives and whose alibi for seeking the society of women who understand them is that they are bored to death at home. Look at the men who marry human fashion-plates and then raise ructions over their dress bills.

Consider the men who marry spoiled, selfish girls who have shown in a thousand ways before marriage that they never consider anybody but themselves and whose very souls are crushed by their wives' lack of tenderness and consideration for them.

So I would say to the boy and girl who are about to get married: Look well at what you are getting. Don't marry a woman or man with habits and traits of character that get upon your nerves, but, having made your choice, abide by it. Don't welch on your bargain. Don't be poor sports.

Uncle Wiggily's Rubber Boots

By HOWARD E. DAVIS

One day about two weeks before it was time for Thanksgiving, Uncle Wiggily's rabbit lady wife said to him: "Wiggily, I wish you would hop down to the far garden and see if there are any late carrots you might bring home. Late carrots are especially sweet and I can make a shortcake from them."

"What do you mean - late carrots?" asked the rabbit gentleman. "Are the carrots late for school?"

"Oh, no," said his wife. "But you are late picking them. I think you may find some large, yellow ones in the far garden."

Uncle Wiggily had two gardens. One was a neat garden close to the house where he lived. The other was called the "far garden" and was at the bottom of the hill on top of which the rabbit gentleman and built his hollow stump bungalow.

Way down to the far garden, Mr. Longears saw where some late carrots were growing. There are early carrots as well as late ones and these were the carrots that had been planted later than the others so they did not grow large and ripe until late in the season.

But when Uncle Wiggily tried to pull them from where they grew in the ground, he found that because of the rain the carrots had been covered with water.

"I must hop home and put on my rubber boots," said Uncle Wiggily. Wearing the wet garden and the late carrots. Carrying them in his paws, Uncle Wiggily started to hop back home to the hill when the Fox, running out of the woods, began to chase the bunny gentleman.

"Here is where I hop fast!" cried the rabbit. And in his rubber boots he hopped "Till catch you next time!" howled the Fox as he got away. The Fox was not having caught the rabbit, turned back to the woods. On the way he met the Bob Cat.

"What were you shouting for?" asked the Bob Cat.

"Oh, I nearly caught Uncle Wiggily," boasted the Fox. "But he had on a pair of rubber boots and they helped him hop so fast that he got away from me. But I know what I'm going to do! I am going to sneak in and take Uncle Wiggily's rubber boots! If I have them I can run as fast as the bunny, or even faster - and I'll surely catch him!"

"Maybe!" said the Bob Cat. "I hope you do."

BAD CHAP GETS BOOTS

The Fox waited his chance. When he leaped in a window and saw Uncle Wiggily and all the other bunnies eating supper in the bungalow that night, the Bad Chap crawled in and took the Fox's rubber boots. "I'll wear these to-morrow when I chase him!" thought the Fox. "He won't get away again!" The Fox tried to put on the bunny's boots, but they were too small and they pinched his paws. Uncle Wiggily, who was in the front hall, cried: "Yurra Jane, who ran to see who was howling?" The Fox tried to run away, but he had on the rubber boots and they were too small and they tripped him up and he fell down. He took the bunny's boots off him. Then, the Police Dog took the Fox to a dog-

My boy—'e was in the war in France you know, before 'e was a plumber—'e says the French eats good 'tats, and that makes 'em wild. I guess that'd make anybody want to go out and riot and get a new government. I don't 'old with them excitin' foods. People with them excitin' foods, they can stand things. Bless you, ain't we stood Bennett four years? That's 'cause we eat plain. And the longer we stand 'im, the plainer we eat, my old man says. Thanks, I'll get out 'ere. BIRDS CRASH INTO LIGHTS

Thousands of Migratory Birds Killed When They Hit Lighthouses

Woolfville, N.S., Nov. 12.—Nova Scotia's 300 lighthouses, monuments of safety to the men who go down to the sea in ships, are beacons of death to thousands of migratory birds now journeying southward for the winter months.

Attracted by the flashing lights, like moths to a candle, the feathered creatures dash themselves against the tall keepers of the seas.

Almost every morning at this time of the year and in the springtime, the coastlines of the Maritime Provinces, Newfoundland and Labrador are strewn with dead and wounded birds that have hurled themselves against the rounded stone walls of the lighthouses.

Fractured skulls, broken bills, crushed and fractured wings and other serious injuries bring the migratory horde down into the pounding surf, where they are swept against the rocky shore to their doom.

DAMAGE LIGHTS

Even wild geese, strongest and least tame of all migratory feathered creatures passing through these airways, have been known to hurt themselves at lightning speed against the beacons, shattering the glass into particles and doing considerable damage to the light, placed well back of the strong glass.

Only a few years ago the keeper of the light at Cape Anguille, Newfoundland, recounted how more than a thousand land birds of all sizes and species, tossed away their lives, driven to a frenzy by the taunting, glittering light, "on a clear, dark night."

Seven rare specimens of migratory birds were found wedged in between the rocks surrounding Hope Light, Queens County, Nova Scotia, recently, and they have been forwarded to R. W. Tufts, chief federal migratory bird officer, for identification and preservation.

POWERFUL BEACON

Hope Light towers more than 100 feet above the surrounding rocks and waters and the light, which flashes its warning signal to fishermen in ten seconds, is so powerful that it is visible for a distance of fifteen miles or more out at sea.

The largest bird of the seven found at the foot of Hope Light was a Florida Gallinule, a bird about the size of a crow, belonging to the Rail family.

They are comparatively unknown in the Maritime Provinces, being shy and elusive. Our swamps provide the necessary rushes for them when passing in the night, and the winter is spent along the coast waters of the Gulf of Mexico, as its name would indicate.

Mr. Tufts is investigating the problem which has puzzled him ever since he went down to the sea. When a solution is forthcoming it will mean the salvation annually of tens of thousands of wild bird life.

Master of English Trawler Stuck to Post, Despite Terrific Odds; Ship Returns to Port After Having Been Reported Missing

Hull, Eng., Nov. 12.—A stirring story of one man's relentless and successful fight against a violent North Atlantic storm was brought to this port to-day by the crew of the trawler Earl Kitchener of Hull, which came home after having been reported lost.

The hero of the little craft's turbulent voyage was Walter Harrison, skipper, whose sailors called him "the bravest man living."

All said they owed their lives to him.

A violent gale struck the trawler north of Iceland. The wheelhouse was washed away, but Harrison, constantly deluged by ice water, clung to the wheel.

For twenty-six hours he stood the frigid watch. His feet were frozen and finally he fell in a heap on the deck. But, lying down, he clung to the wheel.

Then a wave tore away the wheel and washed it overboard. So Harrison operated the steering gear with his hands.

Another wave swept away the vessel's compass, and the dauntless skipper held to his course by occasional glimpses of the stars through flying clouds.

After he had stood for twenty-eight hours, the crew finally discovered his orders. Sailors tore him from his post, carried him below and revived him with hot drinks. After a short rest Harrison returned to his station and finally brought the trawler safely to the little port of Akureyri, Iceland. Wreckage identified as part of the trawler had been found on the coast, and the discovery led to reports the ship had foundered.

Even ashore Harrison, refusing medical aid, superintended repairing the trawler, and he brought it home to-day.

SEES INCREASE IN SHIP TRADE

J. J. Forster Returns From Pacific Coast Tour; Says Business Is Promising

Promising conditions in steamship passenger business for 1935 were noted in principal centres along the Pacific Coast during a recent tour by J. J. Forster, steamship general passenger agent of the Canadian Pacific at Vancouver.

Visiting his company's general agencies at Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles, Mr. Forster said he found indications that the winter will be a good one for travel, particularly in the popular Vancouver-Victoria-Honolulu run of the Empress and Canadian-Australia lines.

General business affecting his own and other companies, Mr. Forster said, is promising, and prospects for special cruise bookings also are good.

Practically all Coast districts, Mr. Forster stated, showed an increase in bookings over the past two years of cruise and the Empress of Australia's Mediterranean cruise, indicating that this type of travel continues in popularity.

"Independent" world cruises in which the traveler chooses his own itinerary, also are gaining in popularity, he said.

PLANE USED AS AMBULANCE

Patient Flown From London to Zurich; Another From South Africa to London

London, Nov. 12.—In many cases recently conclusive evidence has been forthcoming of the value of aircraft from a medical point of view.

The other day Imperial Airways was consulted by a physician, one of whose patients had just undergone a serious operation, and the result was an extremely weak condition. It had become urgently necessary, however, that this patient should if possible travel to Zurich, in Switzerland, to undergo a special course of treatment at a clinic there.

In view of the patient's condition a train and boat journey was out of the question, and the only chance lay in making the trip by air. In these circumstances it was arranged that the forward saloon in one of the big four-engined air liners on the Crofton-Zurich service should be reserved for the patient's accommodation.

A bed was arranged in this saloon in such a way that the patient, while lying in it, could obtain an excellent view outwards through the windows of the air liner, and there was ample space in the saloon also for the doctor, a nurse and one of the relatives of the patient.

FAST VOYAGE

A motor ambulance from a west coast nursing home driven right up beside the air liner at Crofton, and the patient was conveyed immediately to the bed in the saloon. The flight began at 8 a.m. and by 2.15 p.m. the patient was in Zurich, where he reached the clinic.

Another recent case was that of a patient at Johannesburg, in South Africa, whose doctors wished him to go to London for a special form of treatment. At the same time, owing to his condition, only the smallest amount of physical movement was desirable, and for this reason the doctors were doubtful about allowing him to travel by train to the coast and on by steamer to England. It was decided, therefore, that the patient should be transported to London by air. Chairs and tables were removed from the saloon of one of the air liners, and a specially arranged bed on which the patient could travel was substituted. Arriving at the Johannesburg airport in an ambulance, he was carried at once in the air liner, and a doctor accompanied him on the whole of the flight through to London.

On arrival at Crofton, after an air journey of 7,000 miles, this patient seemed actually better in health than when he had left Johannesburg, and it was satisfactory to be able to record that the treatment he received in London had the desired effect.

"It is the absence of jolting and sudden movement which has such valuable aspects from a medical point of view," explained an official of the special charter department of Imperial Airways, "and a case like this long ago illustrated this particularly."

The patient was suffering from a grave spinal complaint, in which any sudden movement implied serious risk. Yet it was specially necessary that a journey should be made to the continent for a course of treatment by a certain specialist.

"Surface transport, in such a case, could not be contemplated. So the doctors came to Imperial Airways, and the interior of one of our special charter air liner planes was transformed into a flying ambulance, a bed for the patient being slung on springs in the centre of it. Provision was also made for a doctor and nurse, who flew with the patient, to have everything they might require close at hand. Thus well equipped the journey to the continent was started. The pilot taking the machine up to a height where any bumps or disturbed air might be avoided. The result was a smooth, swift journey which the patient bore extremely well, the doctors concerned being delighted at the success of the experiment."

PLANE USED AS AMBULANCE

Patient Flown From London to Zurich; Another From South Africa to London

London, Nov. 12.—In many cases recently conclusive evidence has been forthcoming of the value of aircraft from a medical point of view.

The other day Imperial Airways was consulted by a physician, one of whose patients had just undergone a serious operation, and the result was an extremely weak condition. It had become urgently necessary, however, that this patient should if possible travel to Zurich, in Switzerland, to undergo a special course of treatment at a clinic there.
